OUR 'FRISCO LETTER

then sent out to instruct farmers how to protect themselves from the depredations of the plague-carrying squirrels. A number of these instructors are traveling through California at the present time.

One day is a good thing, a splendid start, but surely past experience has proven elsewhere, and I believe also in Honolulu, that eternal vigilance is the cost of a city's health, and cleanliness is included in citizenship.

One of the most recent practical and effective campaigns of cleanliness was carried on by the city of New Britain, Conn., the campaign being inaugurated by the Men's Brotherhood of a Congregational church.

Six languages were required to tell the inhabitants of the town what was required of them as members of the "Spotless Town Brigade." Several weeks were occupied in the propagation of the gospel of cleanliness. Everyone was told just what was expected of them, and it is an interesting commentary that the leaflets given out to the foreign-born citizens were the "first communication in their native language which they had ever received from the government whose flag was floating over them."

Just how extensive the work was is indicated by an account which came recently to hand, from which I take the following extracts:

"The city missionary had given them tracts which they could understand, but the city itself had never given them anything. Accordingly they responded with enthusiasm. When the man who had been born in Poland read, 'Co many zrobic aby dopomodz oczyszcic miasto New Britain'; when the man from Naples read, 'Sgombrate le vostra cenere o le immondizie dal vostro cortile'; when the man from the Rhine Valley read, 'Reinigen Sie Ihren Keller, Stall oder Scheune'; when the man from Stockholm read, 'Blanda lcke ihop aska och affall'; and when the man from the ghetto of a Russian city read some advice which the pages of 'The Congregationalist cannot reproduce because it was printed in Yiddish—these recently arrived citizens were but having brought home to them in intelligible translations such injunctions as:

What You Can Do to Help Make New Britain a Clean City. 1. Take away all the ashes and dirt from your back yard immediately. Send your rubbish to the dumping-ground. 2. Clean out your cellars, stables, and sheds. Whitewash your cellar walls, fences, and hen-houses. 3. Burn all rubbish that will burn. Clean your vacant lots and alleyways. 4. Avoid mixing ashes and garbage. This is against the law. You may be fined five dollars. 5. Refrain from throwing old paper, banana or orange skins into streets. 6. Plant some grass and flower seeds to make your home beautiful. Every house should have a little green grass and a few trees. 7. When you have cleaned up for Easter, keep your yard clean all the time. Dirty yards cause flies, sickness, death. Old tin cans hold water; water breeds mosquitoes. Rotten garbage makes bad air, bad air makes weak bodies, weak bodies make big doctor's bills.

The methods of modern advertising also were employed to contribute to the end sought. Thus: "At the outset there was the photographing of some guilty back yards which had first suggested the idea of a Spotless Town. This savored not a little of adventure. On one occasion a president of a Congregational Church Men's League narrowly escaped a baptism of garbage thrown out from a third-story tenement. A few days after the results of the kodak campaign had been made public, a minister of a Congregational church was accosted on the street by an irate individual and profanely threatened with physical violence if ever again he was seen trespassing upon certain real estate. Inasmuch, however, as the Spotless Town pictures had really been taken by the sanitary inspector of the city in the prosecution of his official investigations, these and other impulsive outbreaks by sensitive property owners appealed principally to one's sense of humor.

"The pictures were put into half-tones and published far and wide in the newspapers and on the leaflets. They were made into stereoscopic slides and shown to a citizens' meeting, to the pupils of the high school, and finally at a special exhibition given before the mayor and Common Council, at which time the city government passed a vote commending the crusade to all residents of New Britain. Later on pictures were taken of the dumps where the results of the clean-up campaign bulked most evidently, of children actually engaged in hauling away their loads of rubbish in express carts with other children as two-legged draft horses, and of yards where the sanitary cyclone had done its work. The local theaters co-operated during the week of most strenuous interest, and each of them ran a series of the Spotless Town pictures introduced with such exhortations as

Are you helping the Spotless Town Crusade? Here are some of the yards that need to be cleaned. How do you like them? "Of course many of the yards portrayed were recognized by the audiences, but that did no injury to the cause. And the body of public sentiment was so strongly favorable to the movement that the complaints of disgruntled property owners were nothing but wind hurries on the surface of the advancing tide. With the mayor as honorary president of the crusade, the health officer as acting chairman, the sanitary inspector as an aggressive worker, and all the municipal machinery under orders to render assistance wherever possible, there is small wonder that the enterprise succeeded. New Britain is fortunate in having as officials at the head of her government men who are desirous of developing among her polygot citizens the modern 'city-consciousness'; hence they are keenly alive to every form of civic uplift, and the achievements of the city along these lines are limited only by her youth and resources."

But for the Spotless Town League—ten thousand boys and girls wearing a blue and white membership button and each one of them committed to the cleaning up of his own back yard—the movement "would have failed of its largest usefulness." "Printed matter helped, pictures helped, but the school children helped most of all. Indeed, but for the Spotless Town Brigade—ten thousand boys and girls wearing a blue and white membership button and each one of them committed to the cleaning up of his own back yard—the movement would have failed of its largest usefulness. There were some ten commandments of Spotless Town which they tried to obey. 'Don't throw anything on the sidewalk or street,' was the first commandment. 'Don't mix ashes and garbage; pigs don't like to eat old coal or clankers,' was the fourth commandment. 'Don't forget that horses love banana skins; a banana skin is not dangerous if it is inside a horse's stomach,' was the eighth commandment. Hearing about Spotless Town in school, these league members talked about Spotless Town when they went home; and the result was that Good Friday, a legal holiday in Connecticut, found literally thousands of fathers at work with their children, busy in out-of-door house-cleaning."

AN OPEN SECRET. Many ask the reason for the continued and increasing demand for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The secret is that it never fails to give relief. The middle-aged men of today remember it as the remedy given them by their mothers for cramp, colic, dysentery when they were children, and its reputation as a positive cure for such ailments is still maintained. No remedy has ever been produced that is its equal for the prompt relief of pain. For sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., agents for Hawaii.

BOOST FOR HILO

Examiner: C. F. Runyon, president of the Mount Tamahais Railroad and one of its largest owners, has returned from an outing to Hawaii with his wife, daughter and Miss Helen Sweet of Chicago. From his observations and from what prominent people in the islands told him, Runyon thinks that Hilo, on the island of Hawaii, instead of Honolulu is most likely to be the port of call for steamships when they begin to use Panama canal to and from the Orient. A great breakwater is being constructed there now that will give the place good harbor facilities. Many Honolulu merchants are establishing branch stores at Hilo. It is on the island of Hawaii that the great volcano of Kilauea is located. The island has an abundance and variety of fruits and vegetables. Runyon found the islands prosperous and says tourist travel there is continually on the increase. He was impressed with the water-power resources of the islands.
