TO KAUAI

I am going, Garden Island,
 And my ship is at the pier;
 On my lips is formed a blessing,
 In my eyes I find a tear,
 For I never can forget you
 And the sweetness of your smile,
 And I wish that I might linger—
 Linger yet a little while.
 Fragrant land of Golden Sunshine
 Racing waves, with white-capped spray,
 Take from me a fond aloha
 To the beach at Hanalei.
 Let me wreath for you a garland,
 Ere the glad tears blind my eyes,
 Let me leave it here forever,
 Under fair Hawaiian skies;
 That some other guest who lingers
 In this paradise so true,
 May obtain a faint impression
 Of the love I bore for you.
 I am going, fairest island,
 I am going far away,
 Yet I know you will not miss me,
 For my heart is here to stay.

 Kauai.)

DOINGS OF THE HELE LOAS

One of the standard high water outings of the Heleloas is Olokele. After several postponements on account of the weather and other things it was finally accomplished last Sunday.

Aggravations of a Balking Car

To make sure of plenty of time there an early start was planned and we got away a little before 9 o'clock, sixteen of us. It soon became evident that we were going to have auto trouble. One of the large cars began to miss on one cylinder and then stopped dead. Careful examination showed that it was a defective feed to the little vacuum tank; the small connecting pipe was clogged in some way. But strange to say, this stoppage was intermittent. She would go for a few hundred rods, with plenty of snap and speed, then stop and think about it a minute or two, then start again for a similar vigorous spurt. A similar short run and stop.

A Partial Remedy

Thus, they limped along as far as Koloa where they hoped to get relief, but fond the garage shut and nobody there. With phenomenal patience and assurance, they pushed on in the same halting way to Hanapepe, where the garage was open and they got the trouble remedied, at least, so the garage man assured them, but it proved to be only a partial remedy, for the old trouble came back again later.

Two Hours Late

However, we finally made the camp at Tunnel 12, the terminus of auto navigation, but it was 1 o'clock instead of 11, as we had expected.

The Blessedness of Lunch

Naturally, everybody was hungry and the first most pressing engagement was lunch. The Japanese ditchman very kindly put his kitchen at our disposal. We cooked up a pot of rice and reheated our curry, with all possible celerity, while the rest arranged an impromptu table under the kukui trees, set out the sandwiches and other viands and we fell to with much satisfaction and keen-edge appetites.

Church in the Mountains

Clearing away the lunch things, and straightening dresses and stray locks of hair and adding a few dabs of powder here and there, as they seemed to be needed, and arranging the autos in a semicircle so that the congregation might sit on the running boards, we all got ready for church. A wise foresight had provided hymn books, so that we were all fixed for a regular church service.

A Most Delightful and Inspiring Service

Mrs. Rogers sang a simple and most appealing solo and did it with that effective grace which went to the hearts of all who were there—so that was the conviction of every one that she had never done better. By way of responsive readings we recited "the Lord is my Shepherd" in unison, we took up a collection, and instead of a formal sermon Mr. Lydgate told of some of the problems of mission life in the early days of Hawaii.

With the soft murmurs of the water in the concrete ditch, the rustle of the broad kukui leaves overhead, the songs of the Hawaiian birds in the long reaches above, the grateful shade of the wide spreading trees, and the delightful sense of restfulness and peace, it was a most ideal spot for quiet meditation and prayer.

Although it was a most interesting and delightful service, the like of which has never been held before in these mountain fastnesses. Off for the intake

By this time it was pretty well along in the afternoon. Nevertheless it was decided to make a try for the intake, though the leader thought they could hardly make it and back, in the two hours available.

A Treasure House of Scenic Beauty

It was an unusually beautiful day, as clear as a bell, with every feature of the magnificent landscape standing out as sharp cut as a cameo, and with the most wonderful coloring of the varied greens and browns and reds in the nearer reaches and the soft purples and lavenders in the distance. At every turn of the trail there were new panoramas, and fresh outcries of delight and wonder from the hikers.

Couldn't Quite Make It

The doubts of the leader were justified—when 4 o'clock came, when they were to turn back, they had only reached the waterfall with the rustic bridge, but they kept on to the last lap where they could look up to the end. Here the leader said they must draw the line and start back. This they did.

Mermaids in the Mountain Stream

But when they got to the little little rustic bridge, with the clear limpid stream beneath with here and there an inviting pool, some of them couldn't withstand the temptation, so they lingered behind, till the coasts were clear, then speedily stripped off and went in—just for a few moments, but it was like elixir to the soul, and they came like new creatures.

The Best Outing Yet

It was 6 o'clock before they were all rounded up at Tunnel 12 headquarters, had gathered up their traps and were in their autos and off. This brought them to the road makai just in time for the falling darkness, and home just comfortably in time for bed, as the missing car acted up in its own peculiar fashion all the way.

All in all, it was the common consensus of opinion that it was the very finest outing yet.

THE HELE LOAS AND A DAY IN THE WOODS

The Hele Loas Outing club had a very delightful Hawaiian evening last Tuesday when they were guests of Mrs. J. H. Hogg Sr., at her hospitable and spacious home. In spite of the rush of the school work and the multiplicity of social events, there was a fine attendance.

The special subject of the evening was "A Day in the Woods," presented by the leader, J. M. Lydgate, who is a great enthusiast and a recognized authority on that sort of thing. He gave them a great deal of interesting and instructive information about the Hawaiian flora, and many graphic bits of personal experience in the mountains in pursuit of rare and new plants.

Mr. Senda was there with proofs of his pictures taken on the Olokele trip a few days before. The pictures proved to be very excellent and called forth many exclamations of surprise and delight.

The group pictures were especially good, almost perfect portraits. Most unique and interesting was that of the church service, the singing of the hymn, with everyone looking as demure and proper, and worshipful as possible, and all unconscious that they were being taken, so absorbed in the service.

Most delicious refreshments were served following the pictures, and the gramophone was turned on and there was some dancing, which all enjoyed, even tho' there were some who "didn't dance."

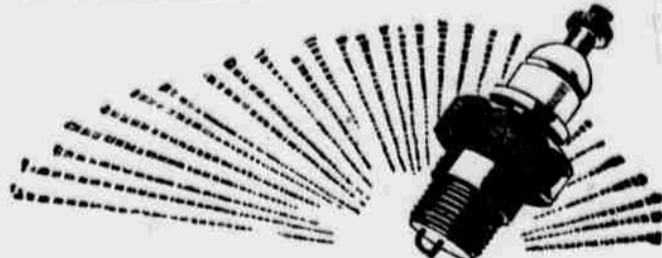

PLANS FOR JULY FOURTH

(From the Makaweli News)

The plans for this year's Fourth of July program is growing and materializing every day. In addition to the announcement made by this paper last month that the plantation was endeavoring to bring several special entertainment features here from Honolulu, there are now plans under way to bring an army ball team and band here, similar to last year's program.

Remember that good time we had last Fourth of July? Well, there is just as good a time in store this year if not better. Whatever the program is going to be it is going to be a good one.
