GARFIELD'S FAVORITE POEM.

[The following poem was a great favorite with the lamented Garfield, and was quoted by him. Its authorship is unknown, but it will be treasured hereafter like Lincoln's favorite poem, "Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud?"]

Commend me to the friend that comes
When I am sad and lone,
And makes the anguish of my heart
The suffering of his own;
Who coldly shuns the glittering throng
At pleasure's gay levee,
And comes to gild a sombre hour
And gives his heart to me?

He hears me count his sorrows o'er,
And when the task is done,
He freely gives me all I ask—
A sigh for every one.
He cannot wear a smiling face
When mine is touched with gloom,
But like the violet, seeks to cheer
The midnight with perfume.

Commend me to that generous heart
Which, like the pine on high,
Uplifts the same unvarying brow
To every change of sky;
Whose friendship does not fade away
When wintry tempests blow,
But, like the winter's icy crown,
Looks greener through the snow.

He flies not with the flitting stork
That seeks a southern sky,
But lingers where the wounded bird
Hath laid him down to die.
O, such a friend? He is in truth,
What'er his lot may be,
A rainbow on the storm of life,
An anchor on its sea.

REMINISCENCES OF HONOLULU.

XLIII.

The funeral of Kamehameha III, which took place on the 10th of January, 1855, was the most imposing spectacle ever witnessed in Honolulu, either before or since. In anticipation of the event, preparations had been going on for about a month, and a great many people had come from the other islands especially for the occasion. There were three men-of-war in the port at the time Tricomalee, (British), Eurydice, (French), St. Marys, (American). The streets through which the procession was to pass, more than a mile and a half in extent, were thickly covered with grass and rushes, over their entire width, during the night of the 9th.

The procession moved from the palace a little before 12 o'clock noon, under the direction of Gov. Kekuanaoa, grand marshal, and W. C. Paki, marshal. The streets were lined by a dense throng of spectators, and many eligible positions on the line of march were occupied by the families of foreign residents. The following was the order: Hawaiian Cavalry; physicians; clergymen; free masons; odd fellows; royal school; faculty and students, Oahu college; other schools; artillery; household troops; the King's purveyor and servants; the physicians of the late King; two kahilis; the late King's standard; the bier with high chiefs as pall-bearers; kahilis; Her Majesty, Kalama; H. R. H. the Princess Victoria; His Majesty the King; H. R. H. Prince Kamehameha; the chancellor; the King's chamberlain; the Kuhina nui; the cabinet ministers; representatives of foreign nations; governors of islands; members of the Privy Council and ladies of the court; foreign consuls, and commanders, and officers of war ships; judges and officers of government; drummers; Hawaiian infantry; first Hawaiian guard; foreign marines from war ships; fire companies; the King's yeomanry; foreign residents; the native population generally; eight deep infantry. The procession moved from the palace down King to Nuuanu; up Nuuanu to Beretania; along Beretania to Punchbowl; thence to King street and the sepulchre, which was then in Kanaina's premises, now part of the palace grounds. To understand the length of the procession—when the grand marshal at its head arrived at Fort street on Beretania, the last division was passing Fort street on King. It was forty minutes in passing one point and contained over 5,000 persons. It was 2 o'clock P. M. when the troops fired three volleys, the coffin was deposited in the tomb, the minute guns and the tolling bells ceased;—and so Kamehameha III was carried to his rest.

The day following the funeral, January 11th, King Kamehameha IV, accompanied by Prince Kamehameha, Princess Victoria, Keoni Ana, Judge Lee and Chancellor and Chief-Justice, the ministers and privy councillors, arrived at the Kawaiahao church at 12 o'clock noon. The building was densely crowded in every available part, and thousands were unable to obtain an entrance. The occasion was the formal induction of the King into his position as the heir and successor of Kamehameha III. The ceremonies were as follows: Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Clark, reading by Keoni Ana (the Premier) of the certificate of the late King's death, at a quarter before 12 M. on the 15th day of December, the duplicate of the last will and testament of the late King, dated 2nd April, 1853, appointing his adopted son, Liholiho, to be heir and successor to the crown, and therein, after devising certain lands to the Queen, he gave, devised and bequeathed all the rest and residue of his estate, of whatsoever kind and nature, to his adopted son, Liholiho. These documents having been read in Hawaiian and English, William L. Lee, Chancellor of the kingdom administered to the King—first in Hawaiian and then in English—the oath of office as prescribed in Article 94 of the then Constitution. Thereupon the Kuhina nui repeated the words "E ola ku Moi e ke Akua," (God preserve the King) which were re-echoed throughout the church with loud acclamations, the royal standard was hoisted and a salute was fired from the fort. The King then addressed the audience in native at length amid great enthusiasm. Kamehameha IV was a born orator, of noble presence, and had a remarkable command of language both in his native tongue and in English. At the conclusion of his address to his countrymen, he spoke impromptu to the foreigners who were present in large numbers. It was taken down at the time by Mr. C. G. Hopkins, who was a practised stenographer. This speech reads so well after the lapse of twenty-seven years, that I here transcribe it:

"A few remarks addressed on this occasion to you, the foreign portion of the assembly present, may not be inappropriate.

"You have all been witnesses this day to the solemn oath I have taken in the presence of Almighty God and this assembly, to preserve inviolate the constitution. This is no idle ceremony. The constitution which I have sworn to maintain has its foundations laid in the deep and immutable principles of liberty, justice and equality, and by these, and none other, I hope to be guided in the administration of my government. As the ruler of this people, I shall endeavor, with the blessing of God, to seek the welfare of my subjects, and at the same time to consult their wishes. In these endeavors I shall expect the hearty co-operation of all classes—foreigners as well as natives.

"His Majesty Kamehameha III, now no more, was pre-eminently the friend of the foreigner, and I am happy in knowing that he enjoyed your confidence and affection. He opened his heart and hand with a royal liberality, and gave until he had little to bestow and you but little to ask. In this respect I cannot hope to equal him, but though I may fall far behind, I shall follow in his footsteps.

"To be kind and generous to the foreigner, to trust and confide in him is no new thing in the history of our race. It is an inheritance transmitted to us from our forefathers. The founder of our dynasty was ever glad to receive assistance and advice from foreigners. His successor, not deviating from the policy of his father, listened not only to the voice of a missionary and turned with his people to the light of Christianity, but against the wishes of the nation, left his native land to seek advice and permanent protection at a foreign court. Although he never returned alive, his visit shows plainly what were his feelings towards the people of foreign countries. I cannot fail to heed the example of my ancestors. I therefore say to the foreigner that he is welcome. He is welcome to our shores—welcome so long as he comes with the laudable motive of promoting his own interests and at the same time respecting those of his neighbors. But if he comes here with no more exalted motive than that of building up his own interests at the expense of the native—to seek our confidence only to betray it—with no higher ambition than that of overthrowing our government, and introducing anarchy, confusion and bloodshed—then he is most unwelcome.

"The duties we owe to each other are reciprocal. For my part part I shall use my best endeavors, in humble reliance on the Great Ruler of all, to give you a just, liberal and satisfactory government. At the same time I shall expect you in return to assist me in sustaining the peace, the law, the order and the independence of my Kingdom."

The proceedings throughout were conducted with admirable order, and the new King's calm, collected and dignified manner made a happy impression upon all. H. L. S.

LATE PUBLICATIONS.

The SATURDAY PRESS is in receipt of a copy of the "Life of Lucy G. Thurston," presented by Mrs. Mary Benfield. This volume of over three hundred pages is principally occupied in sketches of missionary life in these islands as observed by a lady. Having preserved copies of all the letters she had written during a long life of missionary service, the selections included in this book were mainly chosen therefrom by herself during the last years of her life. Landing first at Kailua, Hawaii, April 4, 1820, and spending the remainder of her life among the people she had come so far to work amongst, no one could understand better the trials, vexations and joys of pioneer missionary life. The book is not divided into chapters, but into "articles" of varying length and on various subjects. As the work is prepared much in the form of a private journal, it will be most interesting to those who knew Mrs. Thurston; but here and there, interwoven amongst the other material, will be found incidents interesting to the general reader. The writer does not follow the beaten path of previous authors, but her volume will be an addition to the mass of interesting information published about these islands.

The October number of the Planters' Monthly, a twenty-four page issue, contains a large amount of valuable information. The opening editorial on "Forestry" has many suggestions on a most important subject which should receive attention from the government and planters. The other editorial articles are, "Labor," and "Sugar Cane in Kohala." Interesting communications are contributed on the following subjects: "Double and Triple Effect," by Thos. J. Hayselden; "The Cane Borer," by H. M. W.; "Clarifying Cane Juice," by W. C. Bixby; "Twenty Years Experience in Cane Growing," by Geo. W. Williams. Several pages of items and selections, with the foregoing, make a valuable number.

"Braxton Bar—A Tale of Pioneer Years in California" is the title of a romance just issued from the press of Carleton & Co., of New York, for a copy of which we extend thanks to the author, Mr. R. M. Daggett, U. S. Minister Resident to Hawaii. This tale carries one back to the early days when the shining metal was first discovered in California; it describes the parting from home of the adventurous young Argonauts of '49; the toils and privations, the pains and pleasures, the disappointments and victories, the ups and downs peculiar to early life in California. Although clothed in the garb of romance, many of the scenes must have been drawn from real life, so truthfully are they pictured to one familiar with the people and times described. Mr. Daggett excels in descriptive writing, and when illustrating the scenery of the West, whether beautiful mountain views or dreary stretches of prairie, it is with the finished touch of the poet. The cuts, however, with which the work is illustrated, add nothing to its attractiveness. Not having read the book through, we can say nothing of the plot. But the reader will find much to interest and instruct in its pages, particularly in the delineation of social life in pioneer days in the Golden West.

A LIGHT WITHOUT HEAT.

Highly interesting experiments with a newly-discovered mineral essence took place a few evenings ago at the laboratory of the eminent Parisian analytical chemist, M. Wuertz. Having filled a lamp with the liquid in question, and igniting the wick, M. Kordig, the discoverer of the essence, tossed the lighted lamp up against the ceiling, besprinkling the bystanders as well as himself with the flaming fluid, which, however, to the astonishment of all present, proved utterly devoid of heat or burning capacity. He then soaked his handkerchief in the essence and set it on fire; the essence burned itself out, but the handkerchief remained uninjured, as did his hat, after subjection to a similar trial. Then MM. Wuertz, Dumas and Friedel plunged their hands into a pan filled with the burning liquid, withdrawing them with fingers all alight like so many thick jets of gas. They experienced no sensation of heat whatsoever upon the skin surface thus apparently in a state of active combustion. Other experiments followed of an equally wonderful nature, conclusively demonstrating that the "Kordig essence" is capable of producing light without heat.

We are pleased to chronicle the fact that the streets are being cleaned of dirt and trash, and the debris carted away.
