One Eye Always Drunk.

An Alleghany physician, who, in his way, is a great wag, tells a story of a North Side gentleman who for years has suffered from periodical attacks of what in medical parlance is known as superorbital neuralgia. Quinine proved of no effect, and the sufferer was almost crazed with pain. A kind-hearted old lady living in the neighborhood of the patient informed him that if he would cut the affected nerve with a pair of scissors or a knife it would give him no further trouble. It so happens that the superorbital nerve is the one which controls the action of the eyelids, and it further happens that when a man is in liquor this nerve becomes paralyzed, and it is this that gives a drunken person such a comical expression about the eyes. The neuralgia patient no sooner heard what he supposed the welcome news from the old lady than he repaired to his closet and with a jack-knife parted in twain the offending nerve, and he now greets his friends with his right eye as sober as a Quaker in a quarterly meeting, and the left in a highly intoxicated condition. It now only costs half as much as it formerly did to go on a bender.
