Alleged "Slush Fund" Brings On Political Upheaval, Is Report

The Republican meeting in the fifth district was enlivened when Norman Lyman facetiously referred to the "slush fund" charges and A. K. Vierra, chairman of the meeting, misconstrued his remarks as a reflection upon himself. Lyman said he had heard talk of a slush fund. "If there is anything you $2.50, put it in your pocket." But when you go to the polls vote as your own judgment and conscience dictates, just as the chairman here. If they were to give him five dollars a day to do this kind of work he would be foolish not to take the money," Lyman remarked. Here Vierra interrupted. "Your's a liar," he declared. "I am a good Republican and nobody is paying me any money." The incident was passed without further argument. Wise Appeals Senator John Wise from his bed in the Queen's Hospital appealed to his friends to ignore the "slush fund" charges made by Charles King and challenged King to show that any political worker was being paid one cent by anybody in the Republican party. "The charges will do no one any good and do everybody harm," declared Wise. "They will not help King's qualifications nor aid his chances of election." Debate Renewed Yesterday Clarence Crabbe, campaign manager for Senator John Wise, one of the three Republican candidates for the nomination to delegate to congress at the coming primary, and Charlie King also a candidate to that office continued their debate at a Republican rally in Kaimuki concerning the alleged $15,000 "slush fund" supposed to have been raised by Honolulu business interests to secure the nomination of Wise. Crabbe reiterated his previous statement that "I haven't 13 cents working for Wise." "The business men of Honolulu, and not the 'Big Five', met and selected me to represent Wise in this campaign." "I accepted because I thought it was only right that one of his friends should come to his help while he is sick in the hospital." King, following Crabbe said that Crabbe had told him only a week ago "You might as well lay down, both you and Norman Lyman. The 'Big Five' are out to get you." "They have made their state with Wise as delegate and Woolley, McInerney and Charles Chillingworth in the senate." Two days later, King declared, Crabbe had told him, "Charles, I told you it was the 'Big Five'. I should have said the merchants and the business interests." "I submit that it is not fair for any group of men or business interests to make up a purse to be expended for the benefit of one candidate against others," King continued.

churches are placing women on their regular Church Boards. Of course that is as it should be. Both men and women are needed to get the full understanding. "Men have written all creeds, done all the interpreting of scripture, greatly to the detriment of the Church and the world. Until rather recently most theological schools have been closed to women. Oxford a little more than a year ago, opened to women all her schools except theology. That is still too sacred for her to enter. Could the mother heart and brain of the race have had its rightful place in creed and counsel, some chapters of Church history might have been written differently. It was never meant that either half of the human race should rule alone in any realm of life."

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

On Tuesday evening Dr. and Mrs. William Osmer celebrated their third wedding anniversary by entertaining a host of friends at a well appointed dinner at their home on High Street in Wailuku. An evening of bridge followed the delightful repast. The tables were decorated very prettily with old fashioned bouquets. A large wedding cake surrounded by sweet peas made a lovely picture. Mrs. Dan T. Carey won the ladies first prize at the bridge tables and Mrs. T. A. Brown the consolation award. Mr. Paul Lada turned in high score among the men and received a handsome prize. Walter A. Engle won the men's consolation prize. Doctor Osmer presented his wife with a beautiful writing desk set. Those present were the Messers Rolph, R. E. Howe, H. B. Penhallow, P. H. Ross, R. H. Wilson, William H. Engle, J. H. Foss, T. A. Brown, Dan T. Carey, and Mrs. George Trimbale, Miss Frances Seibert, Paul Lada and Walter A. Engle. PLAGUE SUBSIDES (ASSOCIATED PRESS) HONOLULU, Sept. 28.—Dr. Fred E. Trotter, President of the Territorial Board of Health announced there were no new cases of the recently reported plague since September 15th. Trotter said he had hopes that the sporadic outbreak had subsided.

REPORT ON EXPORTS

(ASSOCIATED PRESS) WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—According to a report filed today by the Federal Department of Commerce, exports on cotton were considerably decreased in volume for the month of August but considerably increased in total valuation. A total of 272,865 bales, valued at $31,900,000 were exported as against 423,491 bales valued at $26,000,000 for the same month last year.

Men And Women Have Identical Interests Woman Preacher Says

WINONA LAKE Ind., Aug 24—(Associated Press Mail)—The age old idea that men and women have different spheres of interests and activity, mutually exclusive, is rapidly passing, according to Rev. M. Madeline Southard of Winfield Kansas president of the International Association of Women Preachers, speaking at the annual meeting of the organization here recently. "A vast amount of sanitary and social betterment has come since woman has taken an active interest in public affairs," she said. "Women in legislative and judicial positions have taught us that women, married or unmarried, carry the mother view into these fields and that this is most desirable." Over-Feminized "In the past the home, considered woman's exclusive sphere too often was turned over to her. Men shirked responsibility beyond the pay-check. Sometimes women denied it to them. This is always a distinct loss. Many homes are over-feminized. Children need the masculine touch upon their growing spirits as well as the feminine. Men need intimacy with little children, women need the nerve-rest that a man who takes responsibility in the home gives to them. "Also, in the past, men have quite cheerfully turned the realm of moral life over to women. They have considered it the part of chivalry to play up or play down to the standards of the woman with whom they found themselves, insisting that it was up to her." "It easily followed that men in this country often turned religion over to women speaking as though it were a kind of feminine attribute. Without doubt we have a larger proportion of men today taking moral responsibility squarely upon themselves than in centuries gone by, and there is still plenty of room for improvement. Men Control Religion "While the mass of men may have considered morality and religion to be peculiarly feminine qualities, ecclesiastical and theological matters always have been kept carefully under masculine control. There is much unwritten history in the various denunciations of the effort of women to administer funds raised wholly by women and for the women of the world. The Woman's Missionary Societies have all grown up out of the complete failure of the church to invite her women to bring their point of view into the general councils of the church. They were bitterly opposed by many in the beginning, but have compelled men to recognize women's executive ability, and have led to the place where a number of

Flying Fishes Play 100 Miles Mandalay

MANDALAY, Burma, Aug. 16—(Associated Press Mail)—With its thousand pagodas, its deserted palaces and its picturesque ruins, the city of Mandalay continues to be a place of chief attraction for the European or American visitor to Burma. The palace grounds, surrounded by a wall and moat, are about a mile and a half square. The buildings have a cheap gaudiness about them which compares in many ways to that of an American street carnival. Still preserved are the throne rooms and the apartments of the king, the Senior queen and numerous junior queens. Mindon Min, the next to last king of Burma, married 57 wives—seeking, evidently, to discover what the "57 varieties" are like. From the palace grounds an American taxi takes the visitor to the foot of Mandalay hill, one of the holy places of Burma Buddhism. Here those who are adherents of the Buddhist religion and are willing to remove their footwear may obtain great merit by climbing the nearly 400 steps which lead to the summit. The zayats (rest houses) built at the foot of the hill are interesting chiefly on account of the pictures which appear along the walls. Most of these depict supposed incidents in the life of Gautama Buddha, and provide good instances of an inconsistency which is typical of Burmese. Though Buddha was an Indian, he is always pictured in Burmese clothes. And though he lived about 500 years before the time of Christ, electric lights and electric fans are to be seen in the same room with him. Arakan pagoda, on the other side of the city, presents a striking appearance by its being plastered over with gold leaf. The image housed here was stolen and carried away from Arakan by the Burmans in 1784. It was cast during the reign of a king who succeeded to the throne of Arakan in the year A. D. 146. The old Burman kings used to try to please Buddha by making war on their neighbors, carrying off, as the fruits of victory, all the images they could find. Mandalay has been dwindling in population since it ceased to be the capital of Burma. People say that every other man in town is a monk, and one out in the street early in the morning would almost believe that this is true. There are usually several yellow gowns and black begging-bowls for each block. Although there are already more than 1,000 pagodas in and about the city, new ones are now in process of construction.

Oriental Leader Denies Intrigue

(ASSOCIATED PRESS) SHANGHAI, Sept. 29—Sun Yat Sen, former president of the Canton faction, today officially denied charges that he was guilty of attempting to form a triple alliance with Germany and Russia as the other two factors, through the Bolsheviks. Charges of this nature were hurled at Sun Yat Sen shortly after he fled from Canton as the result, it is said, of documents discovered in his private safe. DRUG RUNNERS CAUGHT (ASSOCIATED PRESS) HONOLULU, Sept. 29—Federal officers arrested four persons here, who are charged with possessing drugs. One of the four confessed, the report states, that cocaine which is selling in Japan at 480 grams for $5, brings one dollar per gram in Honolulu. Officers are convinced that all four of the men belong to the same organization.
