POOR POLITICAL TACTICS

Candidates who accuse their rivals at the primary election of seeking to influence voters with cash, who make charges of the raising and spending of a "slush fund" have no place, rightly, in any party. They place their own will to power at a higher valuation than the fair name of their party and furnish to the enemy ammunition which may be used against the party at the general election if the rival or rivals against whom they direct their attacks be the nominee.

In the party election the candidate should remember that it is a primary and the success of the party at the general election which is to follow depends largely on what he may say in his public utterances, whether or no he is to be eventually its nominee. In his speeches it is proper for him to set forth his own claims to suffrage, to make clear his own ability and capacity but in fairness to his party and its chances he should ever remember that if he directs attacks against the ability, honesty or integrity of his rivals he is faithless to his party allegiance since he may fail of nomination. The man who is a traitor to his party is unworthy of its support at election.

And again, the candidate for a nomination on the ticket of the party that is in power who criticizes the administration which his party is giving the people, who finds fault with the acts of that party, is seeking to sacrifice it in his own interests. On the one hand he is seeking its support. On the other hand he is pointing out its weaknesses to the enemy party.

There are few men in public life who are better than their party. If they consider themselves better than the party then they stultify themselves by belonging to it and in claiming allegiance to an organization which they assert is unworthy. They are responsible for the being placed in office of the incumbents and must shoulder that responsibility. As well might an organization in convention condemn its own acts of the past and promise to undo them if returned to office.

In this campaign such a course has been followed by some candidates. Voters who are party men and women can hardly be true to their allegiance to the organization if they countenance it and ballot for the man who puts his own wishes against what is or has been the policy or policies of that organization.

What has been said may be considered open to criticism by some but so long as there shall be party organizations it is sound political sense.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

While the long sought for fountain of youth was a fable so far as it related to the existence of a flowing liquid which when imbibed or laved, revived banished age and restored the body to its condition of years before, there is a fountain of youth, one for which it is unnecessary to go upon long journeys to find, one that is right at hand and within the reach of all.

The fountain of youth is not something physical and material. It is merely a mental attitude, the will to seek the cup of opportunities for clean, wholesome pleasure and to drink from it. In physical appearance the man or woman who drinks from that fountain ages and alters less than does he or she who refuses so to do. In mind, the drinker from the fountain ages hardly at all, merely gains strength and wisdom.

Next week will be fair week on Maui. All should attend the "Big Show" for there the fountain of youth awaits them. They can, if they will, throw off the burden of years. They have but to let themselves go, to enter into the spirit of the Fair and to take and enjoy all that has been prepared with so much arduous care for their entertainment, instruction and enjoyment. They have only to enter into events or to gaze upon the sights that will be there with a zest, and they will find they are young again.

In the Fair grounds one will meet one's friends. It is not hard with them to live again earlier days with the renewal of earlier associations. With them it is not hard to be thrilled by a close and exciting finish in a race, to be keenly interested in the improvements that are seen in articles in the commercial exhibits, the better fruits, the finer vegetables, the finer class in the livestock that is thoroughbred and so much more attractive than the mongrels of older days.

For the time being, too, dignity can be cast aside and levity given rein. And by following the course suggested, those who visit the Fair will find themselves years younger for days and weeks to come.

MAUI COUNTY FAIR

(By LORRIN A. THURSTON, in the Advertiser)

(I know what I am talking about in this article, because I was "raised" on Maui; can find my way in the dark anywhere on or in Haleakala and have attended and studied the Maui Fair organization and operation.)

Maui holds its fifth annual county fair on the 12th, 13th and 14th of this month; that is, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

I earnestly advise every one who can possibly do so to attend this fair, for several reasons.

In the first place, it will be an eye-opener as to what can be produced in the Territory of Hawaii, in the way of diversified agricultural products and live stock, big and little—including pigs and chickens as well as horses and cattle.

It will give a conclusive answer to those who assert that small farming cannot be profitably conducted in Hawaii—if it is done intelligently and under favorable conditions.

Maui is practically a demonstration station as to what can be done in diversified farming. The homesteads around Haiku, and the ranches being carried on by Grove Ranch, Harold Rice, Sam Baldwin and others, are exhibits.

A second reason is, that the Fair premises themselves are a whole chapter on cooperation in securing a community asset.

Splendid grounds of ample area have been secured, graded, laid out into race course, ball fields, drives and walks; planted with trees, lawns and shrubs—including one of the best exhibits of hibiscus in the islands.

Buildings of all kinds, for exhibitions, grand-stand, skating rink, auditorium with stage, for lectures, concerts or dancing, are provided.

The plant has cost in the vicinity of $200,000.00, and is being steadily added to and improved.

All this has been called into existence thru the medium of a private corporation, managed by the best executive and financial talent on the island; but at no private profit. All receipts of the corporation are devoted to carrying it on, any surplus going toward paying for or improving the plant or promoting its objects.

A third reason is that the executive management of the organization is an object lesson in personal community cooperation.

In no other section of Hawaii is there such hearty and cordial cooperation between all classes and nationalities.

In particular it is an inspiration to see the full spontaneous and cordial participation in all forms of community entertainment, taken by the native Hawaiians—especially the women—more so than is found in any other part of the Territory.

A fourth reason is that, as a whole, the roads of Maui are in better condition than on any other island; automobiles are good and plentiful and prices reasonable. Incidentally to attendance at the fair a birdseye acquaintance with the surrounding country can be made.

It is diversified to the last degree, ranging from the grandeur of Iao Valley and the little known but spectacular "Kahakuloa Drive," to the seaside drives along the coast from Kahului both ways; along the bluffs overhanging the sea between Wailuku and Lahaina, and from Lahaina along the Molokai Channel to the Honokohau gorge, the bottom of which is planted from bank to bank with taro.

In contrast with this natural scenery there are the most extensive cane fields; artificial forestry development; intensive production of forage crops—including the Krauss pigeon pea—"the wonder crop"—developed on Maui and destined to revolutionize the stock industry of Hawaii, if not of the tropical world.

Miles of pineapples planted "up hill and down dale," on steep hills hundreds of feet high and in gulches hundreds of feet deep, vary the landscape in far more picturesque style than on Oahu.

In a few minutes after riding thru the highly cultivated pineapple fields, one rises up and up thru the homestead region to the Olinda section, where from an elevation of 4,000 feet, middle Maui lies spread out like a raised map, with the deep gorges and peaks of West Maui forming the background of a magnificent stage setting.

Returning down the mountain through the Haleakala Ranch, and thence thru the Kula section the broad rolling, almost lawn-like grassy fields, cause the involuntary exclamation—"this is surely God's country!"

The wonderful Kula sanitarium—another remarkable illustration of community effort—is directly en route and visitors are welcome!

The old Makee Plantation—now the "Raymond Ranch," is just beyond and the upper view from the end of the auto road, of the tangle of lava flows at the south end of Haleakala, is among the unique scenes of Hawaii.

The drive to Makena at the beach below the Raymond Ranch, thence via a new and practically unknown drive, along the coast, thru an algaroba forest and fishing village after village, across the last lava flow on Maui—as fresh appearing as the Aliko flow of two years ago, in Kona, leads to the delightful little village and picturesque perfectly protected harbor of Ke-o-ne-o-i-o.

Every point that I have mentioned can easily be reached by auto in two days, and all within reach of the hotels at Wailuku, which are among the best in the Islands.

By all means visit the Maui Fair and draw inspiration therefrom and enjoy the surrounding scenery; and while about it, take in the trip to the top of Haleakala—the greatest sight in Hawaii, and return thru the crater and the "ditch trail," which Jack London has immortalized as the greatest and most beautiful in the world. Good horses, guides and accommodations can be arranged for, enabling this wonderful trip to be made in comfort and without care or worry.

Yes! By all means take in the Maui Fair.

It is reported that counterfeit 20 and 50 dollar bills have reached the banks of Honolulu but none of them have been seen on Maui, probably because the average Mauiite who goes to Honolulu does not bring that much home with him in his pockets.

Your legislators, if rightly selected, can do more for your county than can the county officials. As the voters sow tomorrow, they will reap in home benefits, or lack of home benefits, for two years to come.

Don't Gamble With Fate

The hand of Fate is continually throwing dice for every one. The five dice represent the five great hazards of life—sickness, accident, disability, old age and death. Most men fear all of the great hazards. Don't gamble with Fate! Let a great company carry all the risks for you, so that you and your family may get more enjoyment out of life, secure in the knowledge that regardless of how Fate throws the dice, you and yours are fully protected. ## 3800 Americans To Die Tomorrow

Statistics show that in America 3800 persons die daily, as an average. This year nearly a million four hundred thousand will pass on. You may be one of them but there is no use worrying and the best way to end worry as to what may become of your dependents if you should go is to take out a policy of life insurance now.
