that he would make inquiries regarding business chances in different countries. Since the grand jury has issued a warrant for his arrest and he is a fugitive from justice (see outline of case),—and especially since he left his wife destitute, so that she is unable to offer a reward or employ a detective, but must depend upon the slow method of finding strangers, friends willing to help,—we owe him no debt of kindness, and are morally as well as legally free to help this poor mother.

Olga. I would like especially to get her address, since Olga would be sure, unless badly frightened, to talk, for she is naturally very friendly, and might, possibly, have known something to tell. If Miss Rand is not now in Honolulu, perhaps some of her friends could give her address. Or did she, perhaps, continue to the Orient? Since she is kind to children, she would surely be glad to help return Olga to her mother. Mr. Ellis not only has no legal right to Olga, but he is not fit to have her. (See last page of outline. I am sending you the "evidence," which I collected personally and at great labor, from legal documents and newspaper files, because I suppose you will feel, as I did, that you want to be morally as well as legally in the right before taking active steps to help the mother. My cousin, Dr. Burn Bridgman, Jamaica Plain near Boston, has been of service in getting first-hand information. Mr. Udrick Thompson, registrar and business agent of the Kamehameha Schools, Honolulu, knows me and will testify as to my personal disinterestedness in this matter.)

"When Olga is happy she is very gay and looks more like the picture at the left of the group of three (which I must ask you to return) than she does like the one on the circular. The newspaper cut of Mr. Ellis shows a mood with which his family is more familiar than the public is likely to be.

"In Mrs. Ellis' name I thank you for whatever help you may be able to give her."

Other well known residents of the islands who were passengers on the Wilhelmina on the voyage referred to, and who may be able to find some thread of memory that will help to trace Ellis, are Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Baldwin, Harold K. Castle, Mrs. S. S. Annan, Mr. H. Gaylord, W. D. McBryde, Mrs. A. P. Taylor, Arthur Rice, Mrs. Charles Adams.

The Star-Bulletin adds itself to the chain of workers, and if any of the above mentioned persons have any recollections of Ellis and little Olga that might lead to his apprehension, and will communicate with this paper, the information will be forwarded to the proper parties.

Outline of the Case.

1901, Cleveland, Ohio, John Ellis was divorced by his first wife on the grounds of cruelty, desertion and non-support.

April, 1904, at Dedham, he married Miss Harriet Cox, a young girl many years his junior.

May, 1906, without explanation or telling her where he went, he left for several months. On his return he said he had been to France and Russia.

When Olga, who was born in September, 1907, was three months old, Mr. Ellis came home and gave Mrs. Ellis $5.00, telling her to go shopping. This she did; on her return both Mr. Ellis and the baby were gone. He left a note saying that he could give the child better care than its mother could. He kept the child for 9 days and then returned her. Since then he has several times taken Olga and hidden her as a means of forcing Mrs. Ellis to forgive him after his desertions and abuse.

During most of her married life Mrs. Ellis earned her own and Olga's living, sometimes working as stenographer and manager in business offices, sometimes by renting rooms. During the 8 years of their married life they lived in 30 different places, about half of the time—intermittently—together. Mr. Ellis had several "intellectual affinities" who, so he thought for a time in each case, understood him better than his wife did. Between these "cases" he would come home and instruct Mrs. Ellis as to the proper method of bringing up Olga.

Mr. Ellis worked at various callings: as Universalist and Unitarian clergyman, telegrapher, stockbroker (bucket-shop variety), private secretary, teacher of French, postmaster, lecturer.

Sept., 1911, he accompanied by Mrs. Ellis and Olga, went to Chicopee, a small town in Massachusetts, to take charge of the Unitarian church. While there he received much sympathy from a portion of his congregation on the ground that his wife would not assist him in his church work. In private, however, he forbade his wife to do parish work, and once ordered her home from a church social. He preached a sensational sermon defending the Rev. Clarence Richeson for poisoning his sweetheart, Avis Linell, and later at home in the presence of one of his congregations, he defended his stand in still stronger terms. His wife protested, crying out: "Then I may also expect a dose of prussic acid!" Mr. Ellis produced this incident as evidence of insanity in his wife.

Mr. Ellis now began a systematic course to drive his wife insane. He left on her dressing table notes describing symptoms of insanity, and following these notes by others, saying, "I see these symptoms in you!" "You did this and thus; said so and so."

Early in Feb., 1912, he again took Olga away from her mother.

Feb. 10, 1912, Mrs. Ellis, without trial, was railroaded into the Northampton insane hospital by her husband, aided by two personal friends of his, Dr. Prindle of Chicopee, and Mrs. Dr. Bodfish, a mid-wife of Boston. On the sworn statement of these doctors that Mrs. Ellis was too violent to bring before him, the judge signed her commitment papers. (Mrs. Ellis is now bringing suit against these people on a conspiracy charge. This suit will come to trial October next.)

Inspector Alfred T. Caron and patrolman Frank L. Wight of the Chicopee police were summoned to take Mrs. Ellis to the asylum on the ground that she was too violent and dangerous to be taken by her husband. They permitted Mrs. Ellis to telephone to her brother, Mr. Christopher Cox of Revere, Mass. She also spoke to a clergyman on the train, Rev. Wm. P. Ladd of Middletown, and asked him to take note of her speech and actions and to communicate with her brother. The result of this was that Gov. Fosb ordered the insane commission to examine Mrs. Ellis as to her sanity. In 17 days she was set at liberty. She had to prove that she was not insane and that there was no evidence that she ever had been.

On her release, Mrs. Ellis sued for the custody of the child, Olga Natalie, and won in both probate and superior courts. She was able to prove that Mr. Ellis had used Olga as a means of coercion, and that he had boasted that a woman, deprived of her child, could be forced to agree to any proposition.

April 30, 1912, Mrs. Ellis was granted the custody of Olga. Mr. Ellis was ordered by the court to pay $34 a month for Olga's support, and was permitted to visit her and to take her on local excursions, but was expressly forbidden to take her from out the boundaries of the state of Massachusetts, or in any way to prejudice her against her mother. Proof of the above statements can be found in the records of the probate court, Springfield, Mass., Judge C. L. Long, presiding; records of the superior court, Boston, Mass., Judge Hardy presiding; Welch & Welch, attorneys, Chicopee, Mass.; Mrs. Houston and Bover, Northampton insane asylum, Northampton, Mass.; files of the Boston and Springfield papers for February, March, April, 1912.

After the trial Mr. Ellis had to give up his church and he went into the stockbroking business. A successful deal shortly before the kidnaping supplied him with funds. He had also disposed of the personal effects of his wife and of their household goods while she was in the asylum. After the trial, Mr. Ellis tried to "make up" with Mrs. Ellis. He sent word that he was sorry he had put her in the asylum, and that "the doctors should have known better!" She refused to see him, however.

Mr. Ellis then began to take Olga out and to prepare her for the kidnaping. He told her that her mother did not love her any more; that Santa Claus did not like to have her live with her mother; that he was very lonely and would never marry anyone but mama! That she, Olga, must be his little housekeeper, using both the big and the little dishes! and gave her the new thimble to use when she darned his socks! He taught her to call herself "Natalie Ellis" (long i) when with him, though in Massachusetts the name has always been pronounced "Ellis" (short e), and that when she was mama's girl she was "Olga Ella." She would come home greatly excited, telling all these new things, but adding, "I'm never, never going to leave you again, Mama!" But she worried a long time about Santa Claus' opinion! Mrs. Ellis and her sister are authority for these notes.

Feb. 22nd, 1913, John Ellis kidnaped Olga Natalie.

During March and the first week of April Mr. Ellis and Natalie (as he is now calling her) stayed at the Hotel Arno, Sixth and Mission Sts., San Francisco; Ellis registered as "D. Delisle." Olga not registered, but the hotel people admit that she was there and had the measles. During this time he kept her locked in his room and left her much alone, without doctor, nurse, or attendance of any kind, Mrs. Palmer, then housekeeper at the hotel, testifies to this. Dr. Mace, 240 Stockton Street, was called in once. He states that he did not treat her, but was called in to persuade the ship's doctor to take her on board. He reported the case to the board of health, April 2d, under the name of "Natalie Ellis."

Mr. Ellis purchased a round-trip ticket to Sydney, Australia, from the Union S. S. Co., to sail April 2. This was cancelled. He then bought a one-way, through trip ticket to Hongkong from the Pacific Mail S. S. Co. and sailed April 9th on the Wilhelmina. Between Honolulu and Yokohama he sailed on the Manchuria, of the Pacific Mail S. S. line. This is all that is known to date, Aug. 6, 1913.

MOTHER APPEALS TO THE MOTHERS OF THE WORLD

Following is the heart rending cry for news of her lost child, issued to "the mothers of the world," by Mrs. Ellis:

Mothers! Will you help? Fathers! Won't you help?

Big sisters, big brothers, uncles, aunts, any one and every one who loves little children, won't you help me to find my little girl, who was kidnaped from me by her father, Feb. 22, after the superior court of Massachusetts had awarded her to me? Both father and child have disappeared and I have been unable to find even a trace of my little daughter.

Will you be on the watch for a little flaxen-haired, blue-eyed child, 5 1/2 years old, with a dimple in each cheek?

Will you cut out her picture and mail it to friends at distant points? Her father may have taken her to England or even to Australia.

Will the newspapers all over the country listen to a mother's cry and republish the facts to aid the police in apprehending my husband and restoring Olga to me?

Her father's name is John Ellis, 45 years old, 5 feet 3 inches tall, light brown hair and smooth shaven, although it is possible he may have grown a beard or mustache by this time.

Won't you who are reading this page be a link in an endless chain to hunt for my little girl and send copies of this letter, all over the world?

Clergymen, teachers, women's clubs, mothers' clubs, won't you cut this out and ask the news editor of your paper to publish it, not once, but frequently?

If you or your friends are con-

MAZDA

To the ancient Persians, Mazda, the deity of Light, represented light in its highest and truest form. Mazda is, therefore, a highly appropriate name to be applied to the highest and best form of light known today—to the highest development of the Tungsten lamp. The Westinghouse Mazda Lamp gives twice the light of the old-style incandescent lamp at less cost. Mazda and Westinghouse are two names that it will pay you to remember when buying lamps. We want you to use them, because we want you to get your money's worth.

Fort Shafter Notes

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence]
FORT SHAFTER, September 6.—
The game of baseball this afternoon between Companies C and G, Second Infantry, for regimental honors, should be a good one, with plenty of excitement. Company C will have the strong right arm of "Rosin" Kelley to depend on, while the hard-bitten team from the second battalion will pin their faith to the wing of "Doc" White.

The teams in the series are well bunched, and interest keen.

Captain Paul B. Malone will have charge of the game, which starts at 2 o'clock sharp.

The following named enlisted men have been ordered to proceed on the Logan, sailing this afternoon, to Fort McDowell, California, reporting upon arrival to the commanding officer for discharge:

Private Hubert Tischler, Co. B, Private George Picard, Co. C, Musliman Abraham Kriedman, Co. F, Private Frank R. Wadley, Co. L, Sergeant William Dahlke, Co. M, Second Infantry, and 1st Cl. Pvt. Grover C. Jones, Co. I, Engrs.

Lieutenant Phillip Jacob Lauber, who has been a member of the second "foot" for ten years, and is leaving on the "Logan," was tendered a farewell concert immediately after retreat last evening.

"Der Wacht am Rhein," "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and other appropriate selections were rendered.

Lieutenant Ridd of the 4th Cavalry, a member of the polo team of that regiment is being sent to the States on the "Logan," on account of illness.

Sec. McAdoo announces his readiness to deposit U. S. Millions to help move the crops in South and West. Geo. A. Martin, Wally Bldg., will make you a perfect-fitting suit for twenty-five that can not be equalled in this city.

More Palm Beach Suits

We have just received a shipment of these popular garments — this time some of them in Norfolk Jacket effects—very swagger and very comfortable. The most satisfactory suit for the price, $12.50, we have ever offered. They wash beautifully with but a bare suspicion of shrinkage.
