ASTRONOMICAL STUDIES.

By Gottlieb H.

I have just come down from the Punchbowl crater, whither I ran to hide when the Wilcox cannon began shooting.

It is believed that the object Wilcox and his chief abettors held up to the natives was that of restoring his old power to the King.

The natives should be reminded systematically, from the platform and through their press, that the movement of 1887 was not against their chief nor themselves.

I hope that when the permanent schedule of time for the street cars is adopted, it will afford connections at the intersections of different lines.
