

HAWAII'S FOOD PLEDGE CAMPAIGN ON MONDAY; COVERS ALL ISLANDS

Hawaii's food pledge campaign begins next Monday morning. With the woman's committee of the territorial food commission, headed by Mrs. A. E. Andrews, chairman, taking the lead, it is planned to cover every district on every island of the group, and thousands of signed cards are predicted as the result.

Through canvasses will be made and housewives will be asked to sign the cards, by which they pledge themselves to eliminate waste and otherwise help to conserve the food supply of the nation. Each housewife who signs a pledge will receive a card to hang in the window, showing that she is among the millions of women who are doing their "bit" in aiding Uncle Sam to remain assured that America will have enough food for her own men in khaki, and enough to assist her allies.

How the campaign will extend to the other islands is shown in the following letter to Mrs. E. D. Bond, in charge of the woman's sub-committee on Hawaii:

"At last definite plans are being made regarding the national food pledge campaign drive. The date fixed is for the week of December 3. We are planning to spend the first four days in organization and publicity, the last two days for the actual signing of the pledge cards. Your problem, however, is different from ours, and we wish you to feel free as to the method of conducting the Hawaii drive.

"The posters from the National Food Administration arrived only yesterday. These will be sent direct to the county agent, Mr. Moir, and any suggestions you may have for their distribution can be made to him.

"We are sending to you 500 each of English and Japanese pledge cards. To Mrs. Holmes, your committee member at Hilo, we are sending 1500 of each. If you need more of each of one kind of card, let us know immediately the number needed. If we have over-estimated, we shall appreciate the return of cards, and if we have underestimated we shall be glad to make a second shipment.

"Whether or not the national food pledge card was signed in August, it should be again signed by every woman handling food, and the cook (man or woman), that a complete list of patriotic handlers of food may be on file in the office of the food commission.

"We are sending Mrs. Holmes the larger amount of pledge cards, thinking it will simplify the distribution on Hawaii. You will, however, direct the distribution."

The following letter, addressed to Mrs. George E. Renton, who is in charge of the forces at Ewa, shows how the campaign will be extended to the island districts:

"At a meeting of the women's sub-committee of the territorial food commission held yesterday you were appointed as chairman of a committee on food conservation for your district.

"We sincerely hope that you can accept this appointment and immediately appoint your own committee to work with you. Please notify us of the names of your committee members at as early a date as possible.

"A food drive campaign for the signing of pledge cards is to be carried on next week. The present plan is that the first four days will be given to organization and publicity, and that Friday and Saturday will be used for the actual signing of pledge cards. These cards are printed both in English and Japanese and you will be furnished as many as you can use. Every woman who has to do with food will be asked to sign, whether or not she signed the card sent from Washington in August. This is to be done that a record of all the patriotic women of the territory may be on file in the office of the territorial food commission.

"You will see by the enclosed card, questions are asked regarding window cards and instruction cards. These questions should be carefully answered, as we have but a limited supply of window cards. To all those women who have not the window card, one will be sent on receipt of signed pledge card. We feel confident that a great many already possess these cards and urge that such cards be given a conspicuous place in the home.

"The kitchen cards, printed in English on one side and in Japanese on the other side, will be sent to you if you have not already them and if you will tell us the number wished. Also a booklet of war recipes in English only may have for distribution if you will state the number needed."

SITE PURCHASED AT QUEEN AND RICHARDS FOR OFFICE BUILDING

An important real estate transaction of the week just ended was the final transfer of the property on the corner of Queen and Richards streets from Patrick F. Ryan to Robert Horner, the sale having been made through P. E. Steere of the Waterhouse Trust Company, for $21,000. This is considered a most desirable piece of property, containing 6070 square feet, and while the purchase price would indicate a slightly lower valuation than that which has been placed on other downtown property recently sold, it must be taken into consideration that the improvements are old.

Mr. Horner said this morning that it was his purpose to erect a three-story modern office building on the property, the work of erection to go on coincident with the work on the new

SOCIAL CLUB AT SCHOFIELD GIVES ENJOYABLE DANCE

The Cavalry-Artillery Social club, Schofield Barracks, held a dance at the Artillery pavilion Nov. 28 (Thanksgiving Eve) and all of the married enlisted men of Schofield Barracks were the invited guests of the club.

Although it rained in the early part of the evening, about 9 o'clock it finally developed into a beautiful moonlight night. The pavilion was beautifully decorated. The guidons were used around the center and the walls were all decorated with several different kinds of pennants. There were also numerous Japanese lanterns hanging all around the pavilion. The most attractive decoration of all was the club pennant, which was highly admired by all of the guests.

Just before the intermission everybody was presented with several rolls of streamers, with which the guests enjoyed themselves, throwing them around and putting the finishing touch to the decorations.

There was nothing overlooked in the line of refreshments. Plenty of cakes and sandwiches with punch and hot coffee were served.

This was one of the best, if not the best, reception ever held at Schofield Barracks by any organization and conducted by enlisted men. The music was furnished by the 1st Field Artillery band and conducted by the assistant band leader, MacNew.

The club was organized in July, 1917, and since then has been giving a dance every other Wednesday, well attended by all of the Schofield folks.

Federal building. The proximity of this property to the site for the Federal building gives it great value.

2 LINERS SUNK IN AUSTRALIAN WATERS BY MINES

News of the recent sinking of two British liners of 10,000 tons in Australian waters, reports of which have never been published, was received from an authentic source today by the Star-Bulletin. One of these vessels, the Cumberland, plying between England and Australian ports, carried a big cargo of wheat and about 400 soldiers on their way to England. The other was a Port liner, plying between London and Sydney.

The destruction of both vessels was due, it is believed, to mines. The Star-Bulletin's informant declares that it is his belief the mines were laid by Dutch vessels.

The destruction of the Cumberland while due indirectly to a mine was the direct result of her damaged condition. The Cumberland was 36 hours out from Melbourne when she struck a mine and, badly damaged, she put into a small Australian port. The damage was repaired as well as could be done with limited accommodations and the liner again put to sea. Only a few hours out she sprang a leak and went down. Most of the crew and soldiers were saved.

While a time bomb may have been responsible for the destruction of the Port liner, it is generally believed that a mine sent her to the bottom.
