THE MOSQUE OF ORTAKELE.

The Sultan of Turkey, Abdul-Hamid, has the gift of making himself agreeable to those who approach him, especially foreigners. For the past ten years, than any sultan before him, he has been a problem that can be solved by study.

He is gifted with an acute sense of special advantage. In order to win the friendship of those who have the power to influence the public mind, he has the gift of making himself agreeable to those who come to him. He is furnished with a subtle and cunning brain. But, at the same time, he is often a problem in the progress of his own development. This is because he has the gift of making himself agreeable to those who approach him, especially foreigners.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.

The sultan, like all neurotics, has many abiding passions. Thus in the progress of time he has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize the pleasures of the future. He has the power to feel the pain of his past, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future. He has known the pleasure of the present, and he has been unable to realize what he must do to avoid the pain of the future.