How Gold Saving Machine Works

The Redemption Gold Company has opened offices in the Sherwood building in Spokane, according to a recent announcement in the Spokane Chronicle. This is the company whose gold saving machine is installed at the mine of the Cynide Gold Mining Co. in the Buckhorn district. The machine has been working most successfully and in a test run of five tons of ore saved $120 in gold.

A 60 ton ball mill has been installed by the Cynide Gold company and this completes a perfect recovery plant.

H. W. Dorman, of Seattle, representing the Redemption Gold Co., tells how the gold saving machine operates in the following interview:

"In the Bonners Ferry plant at the Cynide Gold Co. mines, the ore is reduced to 100 mesh. An iron bowl, lined with mercury, has an inwardly extended tip at the top. The bowl revolves rapidly on its vertical axis. The finely ground ore is fed into the bowl through a tube extending downward to near the bottom, where it is rapidly whirled against a vertical wall which is then forming a vertical wall on the sides of the bowl, owing to the centrifugal force. The gold being heavier than the mercury, is forced through the film of quicksilver to the wall of the bowl, while the gangue, being lighter, is gradually forced to the top and over the inwardly extending rim of the bowl."

Odd Fellows Go To Porthill

About 25 members of the Odd Fellows lodge of this city, went to Porthill Saturday night to assist the lodge of that place in the initiation of a class of fourteen candidates. The trip was made in autos and the local lodge people had such a good time at Porthill that they nearly forgot to return home, some of the party getting in about four o'clock Sunday morning.

The Porthill lodge people gave their visitors a fine feed after the initiation ceremonies were completed, the banquet consisting of baked chicken and all the good things that generally go with a chicken feast.

The Odd Fellows of this city are now planning to put through a new class this winter and will try to build up the local order to one of the strongest in the state.

Apple Raising Is Profitable Business

O. H. Campbell was a business visitor in Libby, Mont., on Sunday and while there he sold 800 boxes of apples which he will harvest from his orchard this year.

Mr. Campbell says that he will plant another 100 trees next spring to bring his orchard up to 1000 trees as he figures that there is better money in fruit trees than anything else that can be grown in this section. He states that in fruit growing one can figure on about $1200 returns from $250 invested in work and materials necessary to keep the orchard up. He has had great success with his orchard, although some of his trees have not reached the bearing age.

1400 Boxes of Apples

H. C. Ferbrache left last week for points in Montana where he expected to call upon retail grocers and sell his crop of apples and also cider.

Mr. Ferbrache is leasing the P. C. Garrison orchard on the Northside and after having cared for it and cultivated the ground and pruned the trees for 3 years, is beginning to secure good crops of marketable fruit. He has harvested 1400 boxes of apples this year and has also installed a power cider mill with which he will make cider and vinegar from the cull and fallen apples.
