

APPLETON

The home of L. C. Humphrey burned New Year's eve. The fire was caused by a defective flue. The dining room was ablaze when Mrs. Humphrey discovered it. She called for help and Mr. West and Mrs. C. H. Humphrey came and carried Mr. Humphrey, who has been confined to his bed since the first of November, to the latter's home. The house and contents were a total loss. A fire insurance policy was in the act of being made out when word reached C. H. Humphrey in Jerome, of the burning of his father's home. This is the second fire they have had in four months; their barn and considerable hay being burned at threshing time. Mr. Humphrey is still in a critical condition.

When W. C. Kennedy was returning to his farm on Saturday, December 27, he was run into by a car driven by two young men, who were running the car without lights, going at the speed of twelve to fifteen miles an hour, and his car was demolished, but he escaped without a scratch. The accident occurred on the Massey bridge. These same young men were seen a few hours later going back without lights. A lady also reports having a narrow escape of being run down in front of her home by a car running without lights. There is a law against this, with a heavy fine attached and it would be well to consider the cost should an accident occur. People traveling on public highways like at least to consider themselves reasonably safe even on a dark night. There is a vast difference between the cost of a light and the cost of a life. Therefore, take warning.

Mrs. Winnie Cook went to Buhl last week for an operation for appendicitis.

ELDORADO HEIGHTS

Word has been received by relatives here, telling of the death of Mrs. Edith Kyle, of Webber's Falls, Oklahoma, on December 24. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fulkerson, and had made her home here for nearly two years, returning to Oklahoma with her husband last Thanksgiving. Besides her husband, she leaves two small daughters. Pneumonia, following influenza, was the cause of her death. The sympathy of our community is extended to the bereaved family.

Mrs. F. D. Carlton has returned from California and has again resumed her duties in the Eldorado Heights school. Her husband is not received his discharge, though it is expected some time in February.

Mrs. Charles Wiswall is enjoying a visit from her sister, Miss Edna Graves, of Baker, Oregon.

Plumbing is being installed this week in the Atwood home. They are soon to enjoy a luxury few of the farmers on the tract have.

The company who helped Mr. and Mrs. Knight watch the "old year out" spent a very enjoyable evening.

Be ready to volunteer for work in behalf of the Armenian relief next week.

ARCADIA VALLEY

A number of young people from Appleton were callers in Arcadia Sunday.

An old shack is being fitted up and will be filled with ice. This is to be a community affair and just watch us eat ice cream next summer. So get busy and help put up the ice while it is good.

Mrs. Pierce and children spent last

Little Betty Goemmer has been quite sick for the past week but is doing nicely now.

Elizabeth Reid took the first joy ride last Sunday. Following are some of the things that helped to make it so: Low slippers, a sheet of ice on the road, a skidding machine, a bridge, a white horse with a rope attached to his tail and a gallant escort. Just build your own story out of this material.

Bill Peterson butchered a beef this week.

Mr. Paulson helped for a few days last week while Mr. Oliver was in Boise.

Walter Clark is taking care of a couple of boils on the back of his neck.

The skating is fine at Lake Arcadia and the young people play hockey often. On Saturday night, January 11, there will be a skating party, a bonfire, "weinie" roast, moonlight, etc., so come and bring your skates and sleds and have a good time.

There has been no preaching yet at Arcadia church. We'll soon have to get a Sunday school missionary to start us up again. So on Friday evening, January 10th, Mr. Jensen, a missionary from the Philippines, will talk to us at the church. Let us have a good attendance.

Tuesday was a good day for the Oliver sale and there was a fair crowd out.

Mrs. F. W. Peterson is on the sick list this week.

Jack Webster is sick with the "flu" and is in Jerome. We hope he will soon be all right.

The principal claims that the boys and girls of the high school are mighty nice folks, but that they have some very bad habits.

Mr. Snodgrass is able to be on duty at school again this week. Of course we know the reason for the smile on his face.

The class in agriculture is experiencing some difficulty in their laboratory work until some of the needed apparatus is repaired. At present an experiment is on to determine the amount of organic matter in the soil in this community.

It is with the deepest regret that we are called upon to record the death of one of our high school boys, Aaron Cushman. Aaron was a member of the senior class this year and was in school until last October, when the school was closed. He was one of the best students and one of the best liked boys in school, ever ready and willing to work and help in every way that he could. As yet many of us can not bring ourselves to the sad fact that Aaron is dead.

Teachers and students alike were grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Faye Vaughn, which occurred Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Vaughn was the teacher of the third grade in the city schools and reported for duty Monday of last week, but upon examination by Miss Nesbit, the nurse, was found ill and taken home. Her illness developed into influenza and later other complications prevented her recovery. Mrs. Vaughn was a conscientious worker and shall be sadly missed from our midst.

The attendance at school is slowly increasing again. There has not been any serious case of illness originating in school. The rooms in the city building are all well ventilated. No one has been compelled or even asked to attend school but those wishing credit for work done will need to enter school now or not at all, this year.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

"There were many vegetables growing in a little garden," said Daddy, "and each was trying to do its very best."

"The garden was not large, but the children who owned the garden, or rather whose daddy owned it, had been given that much space in which to do as they liked."

"They had heard that vegetables were needed, that all the land should be made useful and that nothing should be wasted. They had been told how wrong it was to waste, and they had decided that it was not only wrong, but it was extremely stupid. "So these two little boys and their small sister were making the garden grow. Once a week a gardener came and did all the heavy work, and at night their daddy would help to water the little growing green things. But all the rest of the work they did themselves."

It took a great deal of time, too, but it was such fun. And oh, there was great rejoicing when first the seeds showed above the ground, and when the plants that had been put in the hotbeds began to look so handsome and green!

"The children used to hoe around the beans and potato plants; then they would weed and make the dirt nice and soft around the vegetables. They would water them so they would have cooling drinks and be refreshed."

"The plants were warmed and helped to grow by the sun. It really was a very fine looking garden, and all the vegetables seemed to be thriving splendidly. They were still very young, though the lettuce was almost ready to be eaten—that is, if people didn't mind having just a tiny taste of lettuce, for the leaves were very small."

"The children kept from picking the lettuce until it really grew to be the right size, though it was very hard not to take it up at once, for it was so fine to have grown something like that."

"They grew to know what all the little green stalks and leaves meant and what vegetables they were. They loved the green of the carrot stalks, and they thought it quite funny that such a plain, substantial vegetable should be so dressed up."

"And the beets, with their reddish-green leaves, were quite familiar to them now. And the thin stalks of the little onions. The radishes had a coarse green stalk, unlike any of the others. Of course they knew potatoes and the tomato vines and the beans, and there was dark-green parsley, too, that gave such nice 'extra' touches to everything."

"I wonder when our garden will be quite ready," said the little sister. "I'd like to start a second crop of lettuce." "And I'd like to start a second crop of radishes," said one of her brothers.

"Now that night the Fairy Queen thought she would take a walk through that garden, and she heard all the vegetables talking and whispering to themselves. No one else, of course, could understand the talk of the vegetables but the Fairy Queen."

"What is it, vegetables?" she asked. "Aren't you happy? It seems to me that you should be, because here you have such a nice garden home, you have such careful and devoted attention and you are the pride of two fine boys and a very fine girl."

"That is so," said the vegetables. "But we get impatient sometimes." "Why?" asked the Fairy Queen.

"Well, we hear the children wanting to try second crops of lettuce," said the lettuce leaves. "And of course we have to grow and be eaten first. It seems as if we were dreadfully slow sometimes, and we get a little bit discouraged and downhearted."

"So do we," said the radishes. "And we each want to win the race," said the beets, from under the ground, and their voices sounded quite low as you may well understand.

"What race?" asked the Fairy Queen.

"Each vegetable wants to be the first to be eaten," said the onions.

"Oh," said the Fairy Queen, "you shouldn't feel that way about it, for each vegetable has its own time for being ready. Each of you should simply do your best to be well-grown. Then each of you will be winning your own race."

And they all agreed they would do as she said.

The KITCHEN CABINET

'Tis everybody's business In this old world of ours, To root up all the weeds he finds And make room for the flowers. So that every little garden No matter where it lies, May look like that which God once made, And called it Paradise.

SUMMER DISHES.

When cooking peas wash the pods and boil them first, reserving the liquor to cook the peas. This is a French method of conservation and gives the peas a much finer flavor. Add a teaspoonful of sugar to the water when cooking the peas and sometime, for a change of flavor, drop in a bunch of mint.

Lettuce is so commonly served fresh and crisp or with a dressing of bacon fat that we must remind ourselves that it is both tasty and wholesome cooked as one does any vegetable. When lettuce gets a little old is the best time to turn it into greens. Dress it with butter, pork fat, or in any way to give it a good seasoning. It may be cooked until tender, then served with this cream or milk, with seasonings as one does tender cabbage.

Cucumbers are another vegetable so commonly served uncooked that we forget how good they are cooked until tender and served with a butter sauce, seasoning with onion juice, salt and pepper.

Swiss chard is a vegetable which should find its way into every garden. When very young it may be used as a crisp salad, with French dressing, and when well grown as greens. Spinach is another most wholesome green which, when eaten freely in the spring and summer, will supply all the iron needed in most diets. In this season of the year when there is such a wealth of fruit and vegetables we should see that they are served every day upon our tables. For those who accuse the salad of giving them indigestion, let them look into the whole meal and especially the salad dressing. Mustard when used in even small quantities will cause stomach trouble. When using mustard the nearest suggestion is sufficient. French dressing is easy to make and on the whole is the most wholesome of salad dressings. If your family do not like olive oil, teach them to like it, for it is quite worth while.
