ATTACK ON TICK BEGUN IN SOUTH

Miles of Concrete Dipping Trenches Opposed to This Army of Parasites.

VATS IN ACTIVE OPERATION

Real Results Achieved Through Patriotic Action of Owners, Who Are Willingly Driving Cattle Through Disinfectants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The first action in this year's effort to free 100,000 more square miles of Southern territory from cattle tick and costly fever tick began with the first warm days of spring when 1,250,000 cattle in 275 counties in the South began their fortnightly march to the dipping vats.

Twenty-three thousand dipping vats are actively in operation, and these vats if placed end to end would measure 100 miles of concrete trenches erected to oppose the costly army of the cattle tick. In charge of the vats are 285 inspectors of the United States department of agriculture, 280 state inspectors and 1,000 county inspectors, all working in co-operation.

Achieve Real Results. The real results, however, are achieved through the patriotic determination of thousands upon thousands of cattle owners who willingly are driving their cattle through the dipping vats each fortnight. They have come to realize how great is the toll they have been made to pay to the tick and are particularly anxious to get rid of this meat-wasting parasite this year when meat is so important a war food.

With warm weather the tiny tick eggs laid last fall in the grass hatch out and the baby ticks get on the cattle to suck blood and to give them deadly tick fever. These ticks if left alive long enough to mature and lay eggs multiply prodigiously. The dipping in the vat each fortnight catches these newly hatched ticks before they have got to the egg-laying stage.

No More Ticks. After a few months of dipping there are no more live ticks to lay eggs and no more eggs left to hatch out in the grass. Cows and steers instead of turning a large part of the feed they eat into ticks, turn all of it into milk and meat.

By December 1 it is hoped that 125 additional counties of the South will be freed from this pest. At the rate tick eradication is now going, officials of the department believe that in 1923 the South will be practically free of cattle ticks and will have come into its own as a cattle-raising section.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Blest be the tongue that speaks no ill. Whose words are always true. That keeps the law of kindness still. Whatever others do.

Blest be the hands that toil to aid. The great world's ceaseless need. The hands that never are afraid. To do a kindly deed.

IN CHERRY TIME.

The cherry pie is considered the blue queen of pie excellence; and who could refuse a wedge of juicy lusciousness? Cherries, like many of our fruits, cannot be enjoyed to the full until one may pick and eat from the trees when the fruit is in its prime. Fine varieties are the wonderful Bing and Royal Ann which grow in perfection in southern Idaho where the trees are as large as an ordinary shade tree, carrying tons of the luscious fruit. An experience never to be forgotten is to ride under those trees, picking the great meaty cherries, so solid that there is no danger of staining the gown, with all the can hold. Spiced Cherries.—Cherries are spiced as any other fruit. Take seven pounds of the cherries to five pounds of sugar, three tablespoons each of cinnamon and cloves tied in a cloth and cooked in a pint of vinegar. Cook all together an hour and a half very slowly. Remove the bag of spices, if desired, before putting away.

Cherry Olives.—Get the rich, dark, well-flavored cherries. To a pint of the cherries left with the stems on add a cup each of water and vinegar; add a teaspoonful of salt and seal. They will be ready as an appetizer in two weeks.
Pickled Cherries.—Put the desired quantity of cherries and cover over night with a good vinegar; in the morning drain and add an equal weight of sugar. Stir occasionally through the day, then set away in a cool cellar, covered with a cloth and plate. The vinegar may be sweetened and bottled for a summer drink.
Cherries canned fresh are delicious. Add equal measures of pitted cherries and sugar, stir until the sugar is dissolved, can in sterile jars, seal and keep in a cold place. If you have room in the ice chest a few pints may be used most acceptably all through the hot weather, as a garnish for pudding and ices.

Should Betrothals be Advertised?

By Laura Jean Libbey

Ask me no more—thy fate and mine are sealed. I strive against the stream, and all in vain. Let the great river take me to the main! No more dear love, for at a touch I yield.

Ask me no more. We have all heard of censoring beaux, but here's another trial that expectant lovers may soon face—that of having their betrothal registered.

A statesman, anxious to win fame, has actually set forth the idea which he hopes to establish as a law. It would checkmate the backsliding beau, who has begun to waver of his sweetheart; nip off those bugaboo breach of promise cases, where the swain avers he didn't and the maid he did. It would be a benefit to the timid bachelor who, like a moth, hovers about "the fascinating widow, trying to make up his mind whether it is wisest and best to woo and wed or take unto himself that old timely advice: "Beware of widows." The enterprising widow in such a case would have to await his decision, no matter how impatient she might be to grasp time and the man by the forelock.

Of course, advertising a betrothal has its advantages. Then, again, there's another side of the question which bears weight against it. If a modest girl has become betrothed to a fickle lover and he deserted her, how distressed she would feel to explain how it came about to her gloating five hundred friends. Again, many such girls may actually become betrothed half a dozen times before they decide they have come across the right man. There are any amount of kin people who would "have the laugh on them" for catching so many beaux, yet not getting one of them to the altar.

There are timid men as well as timid women. Many a man would not propose marriage if he was under the necessity of having his intention wed made public. He may not care to have his associates find this out. If he has old loves in the background, what an opportunity for them to step forward and make trouble for him, badling at one fell swoop his excellent resolve to turn over a new leaf, to settle down and marry. So there you are. When it comes to it, a man who has the desire to marry after finding the right girl will not need the law to force him to carry out his love vows. As for the fickle fellow, whose admiration flickers out, isn't it best for the girl to be rid of him without the world knowing all about it? It would be the height of foolishness for the maiden to resort to the law and bind herself for all time to such a human bubble. It seems that such a law would be productive of as much harm as good. Delinquent lovers should not be spurred on. Lost interest in a man's heart is seldom or never regained. Where there's no interest, how can there be love? Betrothals are sacred and should concern only the two whose happiness is at stake. It is said that youth is ever confiding. We can almost forgive its disinclination to follow the counsel of age. It rejects suspicion. Young men entering betrothals generally mean what they say.

NOT ONLY FOR WHAT THEY HAVE ACCOMPLISHED AND DONE, BUT AS MUCH FOR WHAT THEY HAVE SUFFERED AND LOST.

Each boy who returns to us from the service is entitled to, and will have, our heartfelt thanks and kindly consideration.

Wherever we can be of service, boys, rest assured we shall gladly do all we can.
