CHAUTAQUA ASSOCIATION.

Local People Organize Independent Body; To Include Civic Progress.

The employment of independent Chautauqua talent especially suited to the tastes of the people of this community is one of the basic objects of local Chautauqua promoters who held a meeting Tuesday evening and appointed committees to take charge of the 1919 Chautauqua assembly to be held under the auspices of the Grangeville Independent Chautauqua Association. This organization is to be made a permanent association and the program outlined includes a number of movements for civic progress and community welfare in addition to the annual Chautauquas. At Tuesday night's meeting a committee consisting of C. E. Krakau, chairman, Frank McGraw, Luther Case, John D. Long and Keith Fenn was appointed to handle the 1919 Chautauqua and talent will be engaged as soon as the desired artists can be reached with a contract. The talent will be engaged independently and every effort put forward to stage the best Chautauqua in the history of the county. The committee plans to import one speaker of national reputation, or perhaps a concert band which will be the stellar attraction in a long list of talent of recognized merit. A committee consisting of H. Taylor, Geo. W. Manning and J. A. Pine was appointed to prepare constitution and by-laws for the permanent organization.

FARM BUREAU IN ANNUAL MEETING

Session Will Be Held at Court House, Grangeville, Saturday, April 19.

The Farm Bureau is meeting with favor among the farmers in every section of the county and will start out with a larger membership than any of the thirty farm bureaus now organized in the state could boast of during their first year. The communities have not all turned in their lists of membership but it has been estimated that before the date set for the annual meeting there will be over 700 farmers members of the bureau. With this membership to start off with and the increasing interest that is sure to follow the Idaho County Farm Bureau will soon become a strong working organization and command a place among the most effective farm bureaus in the state.

The executive board of the bureau held a meeting at Cottonwood last Saturday to make the necessary arrangements for the annual meeting which will be held at the Court house in Grangeville on Saturday April 19 and both morning and afternoon sessions will be held.

The business the annual meeting will have to do with will be as follows:

1. Decide on a county program of work to be taken up by the farm bureau this year.
2. Election of executive board members for 1919.
3. Making out budget.
4. Meeting with county commissioners.

In addition to the regular business of the meeting a program for the day which will include some able speakers and music and luncheon, is being arranged and will be announced at a later date.

The following committees were appointed to act at the annual meeting:

Program of Work Committee.

Geo. A. Cowgill, chairman, Lake, Geo. Bentz, Whitebird; Howard McKinley, Cottonwood; Adolph Hinkley, Winona, Sam Hozig, Koskila.

Nominating Committee.

James Surridge, chairman Harpster; Joe McDonald, Fenn; Dick Haskins, Grangeville; Adolph Schroeder, Kootenaville; J. L. Stewart, Lake.

OUT FROM CANFIELD.

A. Nepean and daughter Miss Vesta are in the city being in attendance at the preliminary hearing of Mrs. R. H. Otto, who is charged with assault with a deadly weapon on the person of Miss Nepean.

BIG REALTY DEAL CLOSED THIS WEEK; TOTALS OVER $58,000

George Behean, Former Salmon River Cattle King, Will Enter Agricultural Field on Large Scale; Closed Out Stock Holdings Recently.

Another real estate deal was consummated this week through which George Behean became the owner of 553 acres of fine Camas Prairie agricultural land almost adjoining the city of Grangeville. The body of land comprised four tracts as follows: The William Squibb place of 160 acres, entered into the deal at $125 per acre; 80 acres belonging to John Powell, at $112.50; the J. Frank Sims' place of 233 acres, at $91, and an 80-acre tract belonging to Mrs. R. W. Overman, the price of which we did not learn, making a total of 553 acres lying in one body which will make one of the most ideal ranches on Camas Prairie.

The land is located less than one mile from Grangeville, and the William Squibb farm is very highly improved, and as far as we have been able to learn brought the highest price of any land which has been sold on Camas Prairie. Mr. Behean takes immediate possession of the entire purchase with the exception of the Overman 80, which he will take over this fall. He however, will get one-third of the crop this year.

CROWDS ENTERTAINED BY BAND'S '49 SHOW

The third annual "Days of '49" show staged by the well known musical organization known throughout the entire west as the Cowboy Band, has passed into history. The show opened last Thursday night and was brought to a close at midnight on Saturday, and was by odds the most successful event of the three.

On the opening night a record crowd was in attendance which was greatly augmented by the delegation from the Lewiston Commercial club and citizens from that section and other points along the line. All of the old time scenes were depicted true to form and used every kind of entertainment that was to be had in the old days was provided for those who wished to indulge.

The show is staged yearly for the benefit of the Cowboy band, this method being used to raise funds in place of popular subscription, with which the populace seem to be burdened along other lines. Last year the city council assisted the band but the monthly donation was discontinued at the request of the management and since that time they have been relying solely upon their own resources for the success of the organization which has now reached proportions of national distinction. The boys have secured a leader in the person of Sgt. J. E. Runing who also directs the orchestra the work of which will compare favorably with any institution in the west.

On Friday night the boys were greeted by an overflow house and had provided an outside attraction, the Barnett Imperial orchestra whose program was interspersed with vocal numbers by E. J. Blount, bass, whose efforts were very pleasing to the immense throng.

The dances on each of the three nights were well patronized and the music furnished was of the highest order, the Cowboy band orchestra furnishing the music on the first and third evenings and the Barnett Imperial orchestra on the second evening, the hall being packed to capacity on each occasion.

Among the features of the old time show was the band concert of Friday night and the exhibition of Ross Frizzell with the rope. On this evening the band split into two parts and marched to their rendezvous at the corner of Main and Hall streets. Both were playing the same piece of music and on converging merged into one body which seemed to take extremely well with the spectators who had all most packed the streets. On the inside of the circle Ross Frizzell gave an exhibition of rope spinning that was beyond compare and would put to shame many of the performers who have appeared in this section in the same role.

That the Lewiston delegation was well pleased with the reception given them is evidenced by the interview with the Lewiston delegation from the Lewiston Commercial club and citizens from that section and other points along the line. All of the old time scenes were depicted true to form and used every kind of entertainment that was to be had in the old days was provided for those who wished to indulge.

The population of Grangeville in the west and would be a credit to a city of quite assuming proportions. The people are behind the band and that means it will continue to improve. The band organization will receive a substantial sum from the celebration now being staged and it is entitled to every cent that can be realized.

"The frontier town settings are now true to the old days but they will be improved from year to year as the scope of the show is enlarged and I am firm in the belief that in the staging of these frontier celebrations the Grangeville cowboy band has hit upon a plan that will attract visitors from long distances. The frontier celebration naturally fits well with the regalia of the band members and the two features are in perfect harmony.

"The old gambling games of the frontier have already passed into history. The faro and the roulette were witnessed last night exist only in the most exclusive gambling clubs of the large cities and are even rare in such places. Within a very few years they will not exist as a reality and already there is a natural desire to look upon the pastimes of the sturdy men who carved the frontier history. I was surprised last evening at the large number who did not know faro or roulette when they saw it. Within a few years the exception will be the man who actually played in those games for real money. The frontier has passed and those familiar with the frontier atmosphere are in the great minority. Grangeville is the natural setting for such a celebration because it will be the last of the northwest towns to lose the real frontiersman. The creation of the frontier celebration while there are a goodly number of the old-timers remaining to direct the settings, will allow the younger generation to develop and continue the show true to the original.

"Lewiston made no mistake in sending a good delegation to Grangeville on the occasion is worthy of stranger support from Lewiston and this event should be an established notation in the Commercial club junket book for the organization of excursion parties to make the visit on the opening night of this annual celebration."

George V. Ring, of the forest service, with headquarters at White Bird, is in the city attending to business matters in connection with his office.

CLOSE SHAVE FOR "DICK."

Well Known Chinaman Lost for Three Days in Mt. Marshall District.

Nearly every winter the mountains of central Idaho take their toll of human life as some one either meets with an accident while alone or becomes bewildered in a raging storm and wanders into unfrequented regions and perishes of cold and hunger.

A miner who recently came to Grangeville from Burgdorf Hot Springs brought in the report of the rescue of "China Dick" at a moment when further effort to travel had become a physical impossibility. Dick is an old timer in the mountains tributary to Grangeville and has wandered over the trails at all seasons of the year. As he and another fellow countryman left Burgdorf for Grangeville by way of French creek no one had an anxious thought as to their safety although a heavy snow storm was raging at the time. There are several cabins along the road and it was considered a fair sized day's journey to the next habitation over the Salmon river divide into French creek where plenty of settlers could be found. Consequently there was no little surprise three days after their departure when two miners came into camp from Mt. Marshall with China Dick and his companion, nearly famished for want of food and nearly frozen. Blinded by the storm they had lost their direction and instead of keeping to their left toward French creek, they had gone to their right and been wandering all that time about the slopes of Mt. Marshall, without food or shelter and no matches with which to build a fire and signal their position but by mere accident wandered across the trackless course taken by the miners on their way out for the mail.

Dick is an old man well along the journey of life and when he arrived in Grangeville complained considerably about being sick and showed the tips of his fingers all swollen and blue which he said he injured while working in the placer mines, not willing to endure the chagrin of having been lost amidst his old familiar haunts. It was not until the parties came out and related the circumstances that the truth of the matter was known.

There are other properties being developed in the Mt. Marshall camp and the coming season promises to be a record one and will prove beyond doubt that Bear creek is not a one mine camp.

The ore bodies appear in lenses in a gneiss formation in which coarse free nuggets make shining studs sparkling from the green chloride background.

The lens just encountered is the second in this same drift and in the breast of the tunnel has widened out greater than the span of the tunnel's face, and like the first lens glistens with free gold all through it. The first lens widened out to nine feet at its greatest dimension and yielded thousands of dollars to the owners.

CHURCH SERVE COMMUNITY; NOT EXPLOIT

New Federated Pastor in Open Letter to Men Wants Information.

Rev. G. Oscar Oliver, the new pastor of the Federated church, has issued an open letter to the men of Grangeville and vicinity, in which he has placed a number of very vital questions. It is Mr. Oliver's idea to increase the attendance at the Federated church, not for mercenary reasons, but to make the church one of service to the community, and in order to do this desires the questions enumerated in the letter, answered by the men of the community. That he will be successful seems to be a forgone conclusion for the reason that at each service since Mr. Oliver's arrival a few weeks since his church edifice has been filled to capacity. The letter follows:

"Neighbors and Friends:—It is my firm conviction that the Federated church, of which I have the honor of being pastor, ought to be serving every man in the community not affiliated with one of the other churches in the city. It is not now doing it. I want you to help me solve the problem. I am anxious to see the church and its relation to the community through your eyes.

"I take the position, as do also the members of the official board of the church, that the church is here to serve the community and not to exploit it. I am here to serve every man in the community and whatever a neighbor's fellowship and a man's devotion to his task can do, I desire to do.

"One way that we can serve each other is for you to answer the following questions candidly and frankly, mailing your replies to me at your earliest convenience. It is my purpose to use the replies received at the evening service on April 13th. No names will be mentioned and no confidence will be betrayed.

"1. If you are not, why are you not a regular attendant at the services of the church?

"2. What has been the reason given by some neighbor or friend for non-attendance?

"3. In what way, in your opinion, can the services of this church be made to appeal more strongly to men?

"4. Why does it not now seem to appeal to them?

"5. What practical phase of social or institutional work, in your opinion, could be undertaken by this church that would appeal to and meet with the co-operation of the men of the community?

"Write your replies now, before you forget."

While in the service Sgt. Hoekersmith was a dispatch bearer in the motorcycle corps and saw service in England, France and Belgium. He was in Paris at the time the French celebrated the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine and stated that the confetti was at least two inches deep on the streets.

Sgt. Hoekersmith is a young man in the early twenties, and talks interestingly of the harrowing experiences he has passed through since entering the service.

GRANGEVILLE BOY HOME.

Gaylord Eimers, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Eimers, arrived home last Sunday evening from Camp Taylor, Kentucky, where he had been occupied in the artillery band. While in the service Gay spent a lot of time in the hospital, having been afflicted with most all the ailments that the boys in the service encountered. However he returns looking fine and in the best of health and spirits.

TUNNEL FACE IS STUDDED WITH GOLD

Mt. Marshall Property Said to Have Uncovered Fabulously Rich Vein.

IDAHO CRIPPLE CREEK

Mine Formerly Owned by John C. Fox, Has Untold Wealth.

Parties arriving this week from the Mt. Marshall mining district brought out the news that another lens had been encountered in the west drift of the upper tunnel of the Sherman mine, on Bear creek, which is now owned by T. E. Holt, of Seattle.

This is the property that was purchased from John Fox, one of our local citizens, three years ago, and has shown such phenomenal free gold values that the camp has been brought to the attention of some of the best known mining men of the country, being termed by them the "Cripple creek" of Idaho.

The ore bodies appear in lenses in a gneiss formation in which coarse free nuggets make shining studs sparkling from the green chloride background.

The lens just encountered is the second in this same drift and in the breast of the tunnel has widened out greater than the span of the tunnel's face, and like the first lens glistens with free gold all through it. ### TUSCANIA SURVIVOR HOME.

Delmar Hoekersmith Tells Interesting Tales of Ill-Fated Vessel.

Delmar Hoekersmith, the first survivor of the ill-fated troop ship, the Tuscania, which was torpedoed by the Germans shortly after the United States entered the world war, reached home early this week and has since been receiving the hearty congratulations of his many friends and former school mates who remain in this section. The young man is the son of J. W. Hoekersmith, who with his family resided here for many years, and now a resident of the Cottonwood section. He entered the service something like seventeen months ago and chose the aviation section in which to do his bit for Uncle Sam. After a short training in this country his unit along with others embarked for the scene of the conflict aboard the Tuscania and when off the coast of Scotland the vessel was torpedoed and sunk, and 210 brave young Americans lost their lives. Dick Vineyard, son of the late Judge Lacyrus Vineyard of this place, was also a survivor, letters from whom have been published in the columns of the Globe, but the young men never had the good fortune to meet.

Is the opinion of Sgt. Hoekersmith, very few of the 210 men who lost their lives, among whom was William Droogs of Mt. Idaho, were killed by the explosion of the torpedo, he being firmly convinced that most of the boys were drowned. The torpedo hit the Tuscania about six o'clock in the evening, before a large number of the men had had their supper and it goes without saying they secured nothing to eat until after they had landed on Scottish soil. It is interesting to talk to Sgt. Hoekersmith regarding the actions of the people aboard. Some were driven frantic while others were just as calm as though nothing had happened. During the process of taking to the boats many were capsized and the darkness made the task an extremely difficult one. While some were bemoaning their fate others roundly censured the huns. Those who were precipitated into the icy waters were picked up as rapidly as possible, and it is presumed that the high seas and boating wreckage along with the darkness caused many a poor boy to fall to connect with rescuers.

While in the service Sgt. Hoekersmith was a dispatch bearer in the motorcycle corps and saw service in England, France and Belgium. He was in Paris at the time the French celebrated the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine and stated that the confetti was at least two inches deep on the streets.
