

PUT MONTPELIER ON MAP

The Boosters' club, which initiated the celebration and carried it successfully through, put Montpelier on the map for two days, at least. The celebration brought more people and more money to Montpelier than any other previous event in the history of the city. The strangers who were here were satisfied with the entertainment accorded them, and the free advertising they will give the city will redound to its benefit.

CLASH, OR COALESCENCE?

With the return of the President to the United States, the Treaty of Peace which he as chief delegate from this government has been instrumental in framing, passes technically from his hands into those of the United States Senate. He has exercised the power conferred upon him by the Constitution to "make" the treaty; it now becomes the prerogative of the upper house of Congress, two-thirds of the members present concurring, to indicate its "advice and consent" in the matter of ratification. No matter how perfect or popular the document may be, it cannot be made effective, so far as this country is concerned, until the senate has acted upon it.

Thus far Mr. Wilson has acted in the matter without much regard to the co-ordinate branch of the government, but he cannot afford to pursue that policy of sloofness any longer. He now has the opportunity and has indeed direct occasion, to display at home some of the qualities of conciliation and tact which he is admitted to have conspicuously demonstrated at Versailles. He cannot expect that the present majority in Congress will scan his work with an always fond and uncritical eye. He must be prepared for some manifestation of that resentment which is not unnaturally felt by many Senators because of the feeling that where their advice and consent might properly have been sought, they have been deliberately ignored. He must recognize that their responsibility now becomes as great as his, and he must also be fair enough to credit them with a patriotism as sincere, and perhaps a sagacity as profound, as his own.

The important question then is, how will the President approach the Senate, and in what terms and spirit will he, in laying before them the result of his labor, ask for their approval of it? If it is easily within his power, by taking a broad, high-minded course, to conciliate and smooth and satisfy a more than sufficient number of the Senators to carry the treaty through the stormy waters which its out-and-out enemies are preparing to deluge it withal. On the other hand, a display of impatience with the legislative branch of the government, a reserved standing apart from them, an imperious demand that the work of his hands be accepted exactly as he presents it, without any of the interpretations or reservations which many experienced statesmen feel will help and not harm the treaty and which certainly will not constitute a rejection of it—a display of this spirit may easily create an impasse between the White House and the Capitol that would be regrettable and disastrous. By taking the former course, the best opinion is that the President can secure an early ratification of the Treaty with the League of Nations covenant included. By taking the latter course, there is the certainty of long delay, and even the grave possibility of such changes and amendments as shall amount to a practical rejection of the Treaty in its present form.—Deseret News.

WAR HERO HAS ARM BROKEN WHEN THROWN FROM HORSE

Wm. Harris of Pocatello, was brought to the Montpelier hospital last Saturday morning with both bones of his left forearm broken. The accident occurred on the Fourth at Chesterfield and was caused by being thrown from a horse.

Young Harris only recently returned from France where he was in the thickest of the fighting for several weeks, even experiencing the horrors of six days without food, as he was a member of Co. G, 303rd infantry, which was a part of the famous "lost battalion." He escaped without a scratch. "It is certainly one of the strange things in life," he said, "to go through what I did in France and then come nearly being killed by being thrown from a cayuse."

GARAGE AND COAL HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE

The coal house and garage at the rear of E. L. McClave's residence was destroyed by fire on the evening of July 4th. The fire is believed to have been started by boys playing with matches. An automobile in the garage was saved but trunks, stoves and other personal effects belonging to Mr. McClave, which were stored in the garage, were burned. J. J. Taylor also lost some valuable books and papers. Mr. McClave figures his loss at $400. Had the usual wind been blowing from the west it would have been a difficult task to have saved Mr. McClave's residence.

PICTURES THAT WILL PLEASE MOVIE FANS

Manager Brough offers some good attractions for the movie fans during the coming week. Tomorrow, Saturday night, Fannie Ward will be seen in "Common Clay," a Pathe special feature in seven parts. It is a gripping, sensational and interesting play of modern life, with a woman as the victim. It awakens in the breast of the spectator that pity which Dr. Gilbert Murray says "is the Kingdom of Heaven within us fighting against the brute power of the world." It is a picture with a force and meaning.

Next Monday night Mary Pickford the popular screen actress, will be seen in "The Little Princess." Mary plays the role of Sara Crewe, motherless daughter of Capt. Crewe of India, who leaves her in a London boarding school, while he undertakes a diamond mining venture in the east. Sara's adventures in the school provide her with an intensely appealing role.

Gladys Leslie, Vitagraph's star with the "million dollar smile," has a role well suited to her charming versatility in "Miss Dulcie From Dixie," in which she is a Southern girl who comes North to end a family estrangement of Civil War days and succeeds, and also wins the man she loves and a fortune. This Vitagraph picture will be the attraction next Tuesday night.

Wednesday night Tom Mix will be seen in an intensely interesting western picture "Fighting for Gold." The program for the night will also include a Sunshine comedy entitled "Damage No Goods."

Fannie Ward will be seen again next Thursday night in "On the Level," a Paramount feature.

WELL KNOWN COUPLE MARRY AT BRIGHAM CITY

The marriage of two of Bear Lake county's well known young people is thus recorded by the Brigham City Journal:

"At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will R. Holmes, 305 So. Main street, on the evening of July 4th, Bishop H. W. Valentine united in marriage Clawson Skinner of Nounan, Idaho, and Miss Edna Bowen of Brigham. The ceremony was performed in the presence of immediate relatives. The bride is the daughter of B. H. Bowen of this city, and for the past year has been employed as stenographer and bookkeeper at the Hansen Furniture & Music company store. She is a bright young lady. The bridegroom is the son of Bishop and Mrs. Nephi Skinner of Nounan, Idaho, a graduate of the Fielding Academy, Paris, Idaho, and recently returned from France, where he saw several months of active service in the balloon squadron. Mr. Skinner left for his Idaho home last evening. His young bride will leave in a few days—just as soon as the Hansen Furniture & Music company can secure a competent stenographer to take her place.
