FEDERAL INCOME TAX IN BRIEF

The Requirements Bowed Down for Busy Folks.

Returns must be made on or before April 15. Tax day may be paid on or before June 15, but no tax or interest shall be due if the payment is made on or before April 15.

If you were single and your net income for the year did not exceed $800, you may file a return. If you were married and living with your spouse, you may file a joint return. If you were single and your spouse was dead before the due date of your return, a return must be filed.

Return must be filed with the Collector of your district. If you are doing business in more than one state, you must file a return in every state where you have an office or place of business.

If you fail to make returns, you must pay a fine of $50, or $200 if the amount of income exceeds $5,000. A penalty of $100 per month is imposed for each month or fraction of a month in which the return is overdue.

If the person paying the tax does not reside in the United States, he may file a return with the Collector of your district. If the person paying the tax resides in the United States, a return must be filed with the Collector of your district.

Returns must be filed on or before April 15. If the due date of the return falls on Saturday, Sunday, or legal holiday, the return must be filed on the next business day.

For falling to make return on time, a fine of $100 per month is imposed for each month or fraction of a month in which the return is overdue.

For failure to make return on time, a fine of $100 per month is imposed for each month or fraction of a month in which the return is overdue.

This tax is distinctly a war measure, and is a part of the national budget. It is a tax on the productivity of the individual, and is designed to raise revenue for the support of the government in its war activities.

The tax is based on the net income of the taxpayer, and is not an expense, but a revenue-producing tax. It is a tax on the earning power of the individual, and is designed to raise revenue for the support of the government in its war activities.

The tax is a tax on the net income of the taxpayer, and is not an expense, but a revenue-producing tax. It is a tax on the earning power of the individual, and is designed to raise revenue for the support of the government in its war activities.

The tax is a tax on the net income of the taxpayer, and is not an expense, but a revenue-producing tax. It is a tax on the earning power of the individual, and is designed to raise revenue for the support of the government in its war activities.