MANY just minded people are ready to accept with equanimity the view expressed by some writers in America, who are pointing out that the great victory over the central powers was not achieved by any one nation, but by all the nations engaged on the side of the entente alliance. Of at least five of these nations, or probably six, each at some critical moment during the struggle contributed vitally to bring about the result finally obtained. The honor, then, belongs to all, for no one or two of these nations, without the aid and cooperation of the others, could have emerged victorious.

This is honor week in the war savings campaign. The government wants every person to buy all the war stamps that can be afforded within the limit of $1000 worth.

JUPITER PLUV, and Old Boreas seem to be disputing the right of way, the former being ably assisted at times by Southwest Wind, Esquire.

THE people must not relax their efforts to suppress the "flu." Watch for the slightest warning and play safe.

PROGRESS OF PEACE.

The American army of occupation expects to reach the Rhine Dec. 12, and occupy a sector of 43 miles along that stream including Coblenz. The British will occupy the northern sector and the French, the southern. The American commander, Pershing, has fixed his headquarters at Treves. The German population is said to be sullen and indifferent. Food in this part of Germany has been found to be plentiful but high priced.

Allied investigation shows that Germany's military reserves of food if distributed would feed all the people of Germany until April. The 1,000,000 soldiers retiring from the western front have ample food supplies.

Hungary has agreed to allow Austria one month's food supply.

German troops to the number of 500,000 are withdrawing from Russia. They are meeting with hardships on account of being deprived of the use of the railroads of which the returning Russians have resumed control. Von Mackensen's army of 170,000 men has been disarmed and interned in Hungary while on their return to Germany from Roumania.

Bolshevik troops in northern Russia continue to resist the advance of the Americans and allies.

Germany is still torn with internal dissensions aggravated by the activities of the spartacus group of socialists.

President Wilson called Wednesday from New York for France to participate in the peace conference.

GERMAN SOCIALISM DEFINED.

become the property of the state, and private property, except in consumable commodities, must cease to be. That is to say, not only must all railroads, manufactures, mines, forests, etc., but all farm lands, tools, machines, livestock, and all other instrumentalities by which wealth is produced, must become public property, and cease to be private property.

The farmer sometimes is fooled into thinking that he belongs to the proletariat. On the other hand, he is the most distinctive representative of the bourgeoisie or middle class. If ideal German socialism should prevail, he would lose his lands, horses, live stock, tools, machinery—everything by which he creates wealth, except his bare hands.

Second, the German socialism conceives of the supremacy of the state (the government) and the subjection of the individual. Officialdom, since all production would be by the state, would multiply almost infinitely. We would still have two classes, for there would be officialdom and the rest of us. The German autocracy, in which the autocratic bureau would be chosen by the people, but would be none the less but even more autocratic, would supplant present governments and not only production, but the minutest domestic affairs would be governed thereby. Enforced labor of each individual must follow such a scheme.

Third, the system is founded upon a purely materialistic theory of the race. Happiness, progress, self-expression, is determined wholly and solely by our material surroundings. Wealth brings happiness; its absence brings crime and misery. It is the one determining factor in the status of the human race.

It goes without saying, and yet is boldly professed by its great philosophic leaders, that the family as it now exists would disappear under such a regime. The "overthrow of the existing order," of which the orators prate, but which is not understood by the commonalty, means the overthrow of society as it is founded on property and property rights, and the erection of a visionary Utopia, of which the world has no historical example upon the ruins of the present social order.

The commonalty does not fully understand when the orator talks about capitalism. They think he refers to some capitalist—J. P. Morgan, or some other. They do not refer to a capitalist or speculator. They refer to that system of government by which you own your farm, your plows, your stock—that system by which you have earned your living and saved something for a rainy day, that system by which you provide for your children and the old age of your parents.

Property, which is fundamentally attacked by bolshevism and other forms of socialism, was not made by any government or any class. It grew up and was not made. It is more fundamental than law and constitution and governments, whether monarchical or republican. Laws and constitution came to regulate it and secure it and prevent its abuse.

There are two fundamental institutions of human society—the family and property. The overthrow of the latter would render the former a breeding pen. Property is essential not only to the welfare and progress, but to the survival of the human race. All history shows this. No doctrine which arrays class against class can or should survive. The Christ doctrine, "All we are brethren" must be the foundation of all society. Economic inequality is both necessary and desirable. Its evils, governments must correct, and forever be the champions of the weak against the strong.

There is no more poisonous doctrine than the socialistic theories which are fundamental to bolshevism and German socialism. Whether the end is to be secured by murder and arson or by slower methods of evolution, the doctrine is equally false.

It is because of the belief that there is an eternal state of war between the proletariat of all nations and the bourgeoisie of all nations that we have spikes driven in saw logs to ruin machinery, ties cut too short for use, matches thrown into wheat shocks, sabotage practiced by employes, work stopped under any pretext. It is war. The design is to make ownership unprofitable; to destroy the class that saves and owns and creates. I. W. W., bolshevism and German socialism are fundamentally one—all alike aim at the overthrow of the existing order of society established on property and property rights.

One word more. The socialist party and the social democratic party of Germany today include thousands of men who do not accept the fundamental doctrines of German socialism or bolshevism. They are political parties and as such are primarily a protest against the oppression and injustice of the autocratic dynasty, by which Germany has been crushed. They are united in political protest against a political system whose overthrow they jointly seek. The members of these parties, perhaps a majority of them, would repudiate the economic and social doctrines of German socialists. It remains to be seen whether by intrigue, as in the case of the bolsheviks of Russia, the fanatics who hold to the fundamental theories of German socialism get control of the political organization which bears the name.

FEW ESCAPE.

Woods Worker Flu Victim.

Verne McKinley, a laborer employed in a logging camp at the head of Twin lakes, about ten miles from Rathdrum, died there last Friday from influenza. He was about 30 years of age. The body was brought to Rathdrum Saturday and held at O. W. Stone's undertaking rooms pending arrival of the father from South Dakota.

The father arrived Monday and left with the body the next day for Faulkton, S. D.

A number of cases of influenza have been reported at the camp since two weeks ago.

Death of Kenneth Crabtree.

The first death in Rathdrum due to influenza, during the present epidemic, occurred last Saturday, Nov. 30, when Kenneth W., the little son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Crabtree, succumbed to the disease. The child was two years, 10 months, 17 days old. Interment was made Sunday. Both parents were reported ill with the influenza at the time death entered their home, but both are now convalescent.

FOR GROUP.

"Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is splendid for group," writes Mrs. Edward Hassett, Frankfort, N. Y. "My children have been quickly relieved of attacks of this dreadful complaint by its use." This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. Dec

On account of the general influenza situation throughout the Northwest and upon the request and recommendation of Dr. J. B. Anderson, city health officer for Spokane, the joint convention of the Washington State Horticultural association, the Inland Empire Fruit Growers association and the Washington State Grade and Pack conference, which was scheduled to be held in Spokane Dec. 10 to 13, has been postponed for the present.

The bureau of mines announced Nov. 14 that licenses are no longer required to buy and sell ingredients not used or intended to be used in the manufacture of explosives. All regulations relating to fireworks are also revoked.

U. S. war contracts in France aggregating $1,000,000,000 have been cancelled by the American expeditionary forces.

A liner recently arrived at New York brought 4,500,000 soldiers' letters from France.

Stricter Flu Regulations.

At a special meeting Wednesday evening the village trustees adopted a resolution to quarantine houses in which influenza cases are found to exist, by tacking up a large card and requiring the inmates to remain at home until given written permission by the health officer to leave the premises. Following is the resolution adopted:

Mike laughed at the Judge for chewing Gravely.

The Judge came right back at Mike with a friendly chew—just a couple of little squares off his plug of Real Gravely.

Mike found that the chew stayed with him for a long while, and the more he chewed the better it tasted.

"There's the real tobacco satisfaction," says the Judge: "and it costs nothing extra to chew this class of plug."

It goes further—that's why you can get the good taste of this class of tobacco without extra cost.
