HERO OF REMARKABLE ESCAPE

Sergt. Pilot E. T. Buckley of Chicago whose parents live in Kilbourne, Ill., is back in America after some 20 months of service in the great war, topped off with capture by the Huns and a remarkable escape from their prison camps.

It was on January 2, 1916, that Buckley, then fresh from the University of Illinois, joined the Foreign Legion of France with the intention of qualifying as a flyer. After a thorough course in a French aviation school he was assigned to Nungesser's traveling squadron, known as Escadrille Spad, which corresponded to the German traveling circus headed by the late Baron Richthofen. He and his French comrades, while attached to the Lafayette flying corps, had a roving commission which took them along the western front, but it was in the Verdun region that the American volunteer was to meet the biggest experience of his life. On September 6 last year he was brought down in a fight with three German planes, one of which he crashed. He was taken to a German prison camp wounded. He was fed badly and treated with studied cruelty because he was an American volunteer in the French army. He made three efforts to escape, but each time was caught on the Swiss frontier or before he reached it. On the fourth occasion he also was stopped by a German sentry, but he gave battle with a pocket knife which a German had given him in the prison camp, laid out the sentry, and made his way back to his squadron in France.

NEW AMBASSADOR TO BRITAIN

When President Wilson selected John W. Davis of West Virginia to succeed Walter Hines Page as ambassador to Great Britain there was considerable surprise but not a single adverse criticism of the appointment. The announcement was made just as Mr. Davis, who was then solicitor general of the United States, arrived in Switzerland to serve as the head of the American delegation at the Bern conference between American and German missions on the treatment and exchange of prisoners of war.

Since he went to Washington seven years ago as a member of congress from the First West Virginia district, Mr. Davis has been an active figure in the capital. He was elected to succeed himself in the house, but hardly had begun his second term when President Wilson appointed him solicitor general in August, 1913.

Mr. Davis is forty-five years old. Beginning life as a lawyer in his home town of Clarksburg, W. Va., after graduating at the Washington and Lee university and the University of Virginia, he became prominent in Democratic politics and served in the West Virginia legislature before going to congress and was a delegate to the Democratic national convention of 1904.

LORD MILNER, WORKER

On the one occasion—it was but a few weeks ago—when Lord Milner has submitted to an interview, I had gone to him greatly impressed by the high privilege granted me, and, somehow, expected something rather formidable, Edward Marshall writes in London Answers. I found nothing of the sort, but a tall man, very approachable, very human, ready to answer "leading questions" if he thought replies to them would further international understanding.

That is the impression which he makes—that of the very highest type of public servant. In the best sense of the word, his governmental work all has been service—that of a man caring very little, if anything at all, for place and power, but above all things to be of value to the empire. He never has conceded anything to ease; his close associates declare he never thinks about himself. His heart is with the worker, although his own tastes are indicated by the fact that at Oxford he was pre-eminently the first scholar of his class, despite the fact that brilliant men, including Mr. Asquith, were in opposition.

The passion of his life is to see the British empire knit in true democracy, coherent, unalterably cohesive, so equipped with governmental power and individual impulse that all great natural resources will be developed for the public good. The public good! Those three words are his creed. Now they mean defeat of Germany, the rights of all the allies.

ITALY'S WARRIOR PRINCE

The youngest boy officially fighting at the front with the allies is the fourteen-year-old Prince Umberto of Italy.

As long ago as 1916, when he was only twelve, the prince di Piedmont was a familiar figure at the Italian army headquarters, but he was there then only as a privileged visitor. When Italy was invaded, however, the desire of the heir to the throne to join the colors could no longer be refused.

While he has not been permitted to run into great danger, he is seeing actual military service and is experiencing many phases of the war at first hand.

Humbert Nicholas Thomas Jean Marie—to give him his full name in English—is the only son of King Victor Emmanuel. He is head of the Young Explorers of Italy, a body that corresponds to the boy scouts in America. He has gone up in airplanes, ridden boats, shot at wild birds and down in submarines, steered warships, ridden cavalry horses. But the things he is proudest of are his trips at the front, for he has been there not once, but many times.

At the front young Humbert went practically everywhere, made friends with the soldiers, was petted by them in return and all in all had a fine time

FOR HOW LONG

Emmett Raises a Pertinent Question.

When a neighbor tells us that he has recovered from a serious illness, the first question that naturally arises is, "How long will he keep well?" Temporary relief is one thing, but a lasting cure is altogether different. There is nothing temporary about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills as the following Emmett evidence proves beyond a doubt.

Mrs. C. V. Stokesbery, Park and McKinley Sts., says: "I was troubled with my kidneys for many years. My back was weak and lame and it pained me so I was miserable. My kidneys acted irregularly and I was annoyed by bladder disorders. Day after day, I was laid up with sick dizzy headaches. I was also subject to chills and was nervous. I was told about Doan's Kidney Pills so I got some at the Payette Valley Pharmacy and they gave me a lasting cure." (Statement given October 25, 1907)

Lasting Results.
On September 12, 1917, Mrs. Stokesbery said: "I haven't needed a kidney remedy for many years. I believe Doan's Kidney Pills gave me a lasting cure."
Price 60 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Stokesbery had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Not Originally Military Title.
General, the noun, and the adjective general, the antonym of particular, go back to the Latin generalis, meaning belonging to a race or kind, and itself tracing to genus genera, from gignere, to beget. Generals in Caesar's and Pompey's day had nothing to do with the army; the Roman general was an imperator. The title general primarily means an officer holding a general command.

Somnambulists Deep Sleepers.
Sleep walking only occurs in deep sleep. That is the reason somnambulists are unaware of their meanderings about. Here is the proof. A college student forced the habit of getting up in his sleep, dressing, walking down to the ocean, undressing, taking a deliberate and enjoyable swim, dressing, walking back to his room, undressing, and retiring again, only to wake up in the morning without the slightest inkling of remembrance from the escapade of the night.

DR. KORINEK'S Anti-Cow Bloat

Bloating in animals like the cow, sheep or goat is caused by the quick formation of gases, due to fermentation of the food. Death may be caused very suddenly.
Dr. Korinek's Anti-Cow Bloat is of wonderful merit in stopping the formation of gas and expelling the gas already formed, if used before the fatal stage, which is marked by the animal reeling and staggering.
Price, $1 per box. Each package contains four large capsules for cows, and four small capsules for calves, sheep or goats. Gun Free.
