Model "B" Disc Harrow

Makes a better seed bed! Why? Because in addition to having a lever with which each gang can be angled, it has a pivoted double yoke which is controlled in its up and down movement by a third lever and held to its work by a long, flexible spring. This is an exclusive John Deere patented feature. All Deere disc blades are made of the highest quality of steel. They are carefully polished, clear to the hub. They are ground to a sharp cutting edge and beveled back one and one-half inches on Convex side.

Every effort is made to make the Model "B" Harrow better instead of cheaper and even then considering its superior construction it is as low in price to you as the price of cheaper constructed harrows.

Why Is a Pessimist?

That's easy. A Pessimist is just because he can't help it. He was born some Friday the 13th—in the dark o' the moon, with a black cat sitting on the doorstep.

He was fed castor oil when he cried for sugar, made to wear tight shoes when he wanted to go fishing barefoot, and his whole boyhood made a hard case of "when a feller needs a friend."

He gives girls a good time and other fellows marry them. He tries to join fraternal lodges and the loving brothers turn him down. He works hard for promotion and more pay and gets fired. He misses trains by half a minute and not another one for six hours. He gets knocked down by taxis and locked up by policemen—on suspicion.

If there's anything doing in the epidemic line he's a charter member. If he had been anything but a Pessimist he would have died of the first attack, but he is spared time and time again so that he may sample all the newest things in (itis) and (osis) as they are put on the market.

He is the joy of the encyclopedia peddler, and the thrice blessed of the stock certificate enthusiast; not because he is an easy mark, but because he was fated to be in the right mood at the wrong time. With all these handicaps if he wasn't a Pessimist he would be a Hypocrite—which is worse yet.

The Pessimist is deserving of all sympathy and gets it—not—Selected.

Veratile Nut Tree.

In addition to nuts used in confectionery the Indian cashew tree yields an insect-repelling gum, a juice that makes an indelible ink and three kinds of oil, one edible and the others used to tan fishing nets and preserve wood.

For Sour Stomach

Eat slowly, masticate your food thoroughly. Eat but little meat and none at all for supper. If you are still troubled with sour stomach take one of Chamberlain's Tablets before going to bed.

Our enterprising street commissioner started the road drag on the streets of the town the first of the week. There was some difference of opinion among a very few of the wise men of the town as to whether the streets were too dry or too wet to drag. The matter hasn't been definitely settled yet. However, in our humble opinion the streets and roads are never too wet nor too dry to drag, and whoever is driving the team that drags the roads is doing the Lord's work. So long as the town and surrounding country is cursed with dirt roads some of the blasphemy can be eliminated by smoothing over the rough places with a good old drag. If the streets of the town are dragged four or five times this spring they will be in passable condition during a greater part of the dry season.

The merchant who is a town builder is the advertiser. The merchant who advertises not only brings trade to his store but he brings trade to the town.

An organization of an association opposed to National Prohibition is being formed in New York and is expected to gain a foothold in every state in the Union. Nearly a million people have applied for membership. The main point at issue, according to leaders of the organization, is that National Prohibition by constitutional amendment interferes with the principle of "personal rights and liberties." Idaho legislated in favor of state wide prohibition a number of years ago and it is safe to say that after this trial period it would be an utter impossibility to vote the state wet again. A large majority of men who would vote to have the country remain wet haven't very sound principles to start with, so there would be nothing wrong in the country taking a hand to abolish an evil that only tends to further weaken their characters. Any piece of legislation that can bring with it such an untold amount of good as the National Prohibition Amendment won't cause us any sufferings from the standpoint of interfering with our "personal rights and liberties."

A SIMPLE MAN'S SIMPLE CREED

Elisher—he's our hired man—
 Allows there ain't no better plan
 Of circumventin' woes an' cares,
 Than smilin' when y' come downstairs;

An' lives up to it, square an' blunt,
 Like general run of preachers won't!
 Elisher smiles an' fore you know
 The rest of us is smilin' so
 Ketchin'-like it is! My law,
 It fits from him to me an' maw,
 An' then across to Uncle Dri
 Or Mairy Ellen mebbe; why,
 I've seen it set the pup
 A-waggin' fore the sun was up!
 Then bimeby, as like as not,
 Some man will pass that's mebbe got

A mortgage that his crops, can't fetch,
 But like enough the man will ketch
 Elisher's smile an' drop his frown
 An' tote the smile away to town.
 An' peddle it where, bein' wuss,
 The people need it more than us!
 The feller at the griss-mill gits
 The spirit of the smile—it fits
 Across an' through the blacksmith's door,
 An' breezes through the general
 store,
 Then out again, an' wreaths, dog-

where the map of the world is about to be revised and the freedom of the Seven Seas established for all time, won't someone please move that the august map-makers blue-pencil a line under the name of Kendrick to indicate to a benighted world that the Eighth Sea or "the sea of mud" lies along our main street?
