Idaho will hold no election next Tuesday, but she will watch with much interest the results in the states which are so unfortunate as to have elections.

The Blackfoot flouring mill is receiving orders for flour from towns along the Oregon Short Line faster than it can fill them; although the mill is run to its fullest capacity day and night.
Freight business on the Utah & Northern road has been unusually heavy this week, as evidenced by the large number of heavily laden trains passing Blackfoot daily.
Pocatello is complaining of an unusual amount of sickness among its people but it is of a mild type. This is the case almost everywhere in seasons of drought and low water.

Appreciative audiences greeted Rev. E. O. Taylor at the court house, last Friday and Saturday evenings to hear his lectures: "That Boy of Yours," and "A Glass of Beer Analyzed." Mr. Taylor is, indeed, an able and forceful speaker, and he handled his subjects in a manner pleasing to his hearers.
Mr. Ramey, a rancher, living one and one-half miles north of town, died early this week, and was buried Thursday morning. Typhoid fever was the sickness from which he died. A son is confined to his bed from the same lingering disease. Other members of the family were sick before the attack of the father. The family have the sincere sympathy of the community.
Judge Fred S. Stevens' fame for celebrating at marriage ceremonies has crossed the mountains and reached Soda, the great Saratoga of the West. Wednesday of this week, Geo. W. Goodheart and Mrs. Lina Colwell, both living in the shadow of two score years and ten, came over and asked the Judge's services and patriarchal benedictions, and when he had joined their hands and blessed them, they retired from his office as happy as if the rosebuds of sweet sixteen were blooming on their cheeks, and were never so happy before.
Idaho's First Lady Lawyer.
Helen S. Young, a bright and attractive young lady from Osborne, Idaho, made application for an examination to the bar at the session of the Supreme court at Lewiston, Friday, which is of more than passing inter-

Discontented Children.
Parents sometimes complain that their boys and girls had rather spend their evenings anywhere else than at home, and want advice as to the best method of curing such an evil. When we read such a complaint, it always occurs to us that the chief trouble may lie in the fact that they do not make home a pleasant place for their children. Is it cheerful at the hearth and at the table? Does the father strive to make home bright and happy, or is he silent, moody and unassociative? Are his children furnished with a proper supply of books, papers, magazines and such other means of amusement and improvement as their natures require? Does the mother make friends and confidants of her daughters, or does she merely dole out to them food and clothing? Do the parents, in short, sympathize in the joys and griefs, the hopes and fears of their children, or do they ignore all that is most essential to the happiness and genial culture of childhood? Whenever parents find that their offspring are beginning to prefer any other place before home, let them ask themselves these questions, and they may discover the secret of their children's unfortunate preferences.—Ex.
Still Standing.
On a quiet, narrow and melancholy street of Greeneville, Tennessee, is standing the little shop, now going rapidly to decay, in which Andrew Johnson did work as tailor.
Over the door is a little board two feet long and six inches wide with this sign:
A. JOHNSON, TAILOR.
In that little shanty he lived with the woman he married and who taught him the letters of the alphabet and how to spell and read. It was there he first began that marvelous public career, that, in the fullness of time, attracted the attention of the civilized world. It was there he began to mark out that course in politics which led him up to the presidency of the United States. THE NEWS mentions this little historical item that its readers among the boys may read and learn what may be done when there is a will and a heart to do.
DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO.
Flooded With Letters and Cannot Stop Them.
In the month of September, 1894, Miss Edna Brown, of Kaneville, Kane county, Illinois, started a "letter chain" for the purpose of getting 1,000,000 postage stamps with which to pay a medical institution for the treatment of a crippled girl of the county.
Her scheme worked astoundingly and has grown to such proportions that she cannot stop it anymore than she can stop the waves of the ocean. Already over 25,000,000 stamps have been received, and they are coming in at the rate of 100,000 per day.
Kaneville is a little hamlet with less than 100 inhabitants and the office is swamped with letters. The postoffice department of the government is puzzled to know how to stop the mail going to Edna R. Brown. Already she has received more letters than any one who has ever lived. The chain has been extended to Europe and the first installment brought over 5,000 from that country. It now requires dozens of people to help in the task of opening her daily letters which are taken from the office in wagon loads. These letters are pouring in from Germany, Italy, India, China, Japan, South American and the Isles of the ocean. They cannot be stopped and the postal department is perplexed to know what to do.

Nothing so distressing as a hacking cough. Nothing so foolish as to suffer from it. Nothing so dangerous if allowed to continue. One Minute Cough Cure gives immediate relief.—Hull & Greene, druggists.
COMING AGAIN.
Dr. Keller, Dentist, desires his friends and patrons to know that he will be at his Blackfoot office, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, prepared for all kinds of work in his profession.

Procrastination is the Thief of Teeth.
Consult Blackfoot's local Dentist, Doctor Mings, he may be able to save some that you think are "past saving." He can make pretty good teeth out of very poor ones, and yet a small cavity can be filled with less pain and less expense and it leaves a better tooth than a large one.
