THEATER COLUMN.

Irene Theater.

Theatergoers everywhere will welcome the return of Blanche Sweet to the screen in the big Harry Garson photoplay, "The Unpardonable Sin," which is the attraction at the Irene for a one night engagement Thursday, June 26. Miss Sweet had won a host of admirers—and these admirers have missed her for the past year or more. "Where has she been?" and "What has she been doing?" will be questions asked in thousands of homes where her new picture will be discussed. There isn't so much to say about where she has been and what she has been doing—Miss Sweet in her earlier work before the camera had taken a rather heavy toll of her nervous energy and when the time came that she found it possible to take a long and comfortable rest she welcomed the opportunity to establish herself in one of the real show places of lower California and live the quiet, peaceful life which she had been advised would return her to active service better and more effective as a screen star than she had ever been. There is, however, something more—and more interesting—to say as to the manner in which Miss Sweet was induced to come.

The reading public will identify the picture as a screen adaptation from the titular picture, "The Unpardonable Sin." Those who have read the book will also recall that the principal character in the story, Dimmy Parrot, is a young American girl who finds herself alone in her father's wonderful home in California when the action begins; Dimmy's father is an explorer, who has been absent on a trip to the Arctic regions for some time, and her mother has hurried to Europe to find Dimmy's sister, who had been placed at school in a convent in Belgium.

Major Rupert Hughes, who wrote "The Unpardonable Sin," did not see the photoplay version of the story until some weeks after it had been completed. When he and Mrs. Hughes were finally afforded the opportunity of witnessing the big picture, Mr. Hughes did what few authors of his calibre ever do in the case of a photoplay version—he gave it an absolutely clean bill of health, saying that it filled him with pride to have such a wonderful screen production based upon a story of his.

Auditorium.

Edith Storey, the talented emotional actress, is seen in one of her most remarkable pictures in "As the Sun Went Down," a Metro offering of intense human interest. This picture, which will be shown at the Auditorium theater on Saturday, depicts the rough life in a mining camp in the days of '49, and is cleverly and dramatically handled by Director E. Mason Hopper.

The story was taken from the play of that name written by George D. Baker, who directed Nazimova in "Revelation" and "Toys of Fate." Mr. Baker also wrote the scenario and adapted the play for the screen.

"Colonel Billy," a woman of the dances halls, is played by Edith Storey who, it could almost be said, makes a specialty in the roles of primitive womanhood, depicting their ungoverned passions and impulsive, undisciplined natures with an accuracy which shows how deeply she has gone into the study of human nature.

This woman, living among men as ungoverned as herself, and who is scorned by the more conventional women of the community, is known as a "two-gun" woman, and her quickness and accuracy with her six-shooter gains her the grudging respect and liking of the men. This is not shared by the women however, who invariably turn aside and pass her by. She has grown accustomed to this and is utterly indifferent to it. Her associates are such men as Pizen Ike, Piety Pete, Faro Bill and Gin Mill Jack.

The transition from evil to good is cleverly shown by this past-mistress in the art of acting, while all the other characters of the picture are equally convincing in their realism—all enacted by players of distinction.

Tonight, "Million Dollar Dollies." This lavish, exquisite production dramatizes the personality of the Dolly sisters, Roszika and Yancesi, whose beauty, grace and unrivalled talents have captured the admiration of Broadway and the world. Against a background of Oriental splendor and regal magnificence has been woven a romantic fantasy to display these great artists at their best. The story, a swiftly moving tale of adventure and action, in which the famous sisters do some of the most brilliant work of their careers, combines the magic of the Arabian Nights with the spirit and romance of present-day New York. And there is a love affair aplenty for Roszika and Yancesi. Through the five dazzling acts of "The Million Dollar Dollies" they move attractively—skating, dancing, swimming, acting—in costumes each more wonderful and beautiful than the last, with an Indian palace as a fitting background. An old-world mystery in a modern setting is "The Million Dollar Dollies" brimming with plenty of suspense, love and action.

Sunday—"Three Mounted Men." Cheyenne Harry crouches into the slime of a solitary cell while Buck Masters, another convict, is granted unusual liberties for his services in juggling prison accounts for the gain of the warden's wife. Cheyenne Harry continually gets the worse of prison discipline. Masters hounds the warden's son for hush money. With a pardon in his pocket as pay, Cheyenne Harry starts out to catch Masters and return him to prison.

How he accomplishes his mission; yet how he fails and then again how he wins the gift of love is better seen than read in "Three Mounted Men," the thrilling Universal photodrama starring Harry Carey, ace of western actors.

LUMP-SUM APPROPRIATIONS FROWNED ON BY CONGRESS

Washington, June 20.—House leaders are getting more and more impatient with the practice of making huge and indefinite lump-sum appropriations for departments, leaving the head of the department to expend the money in almost any direction he sees fit.

This practice, which as everyone knows has prevailed in recent years to an astonishing extent, will be checked if leaders in the new congress most intimately concerned with the making of appropriations have their way. Chairman Good of the house appropriations committee, for instance, has already declared war on such lump-sum allowances.

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, pointing to great lump-sum appropriations of billions made in the last congress, criticised them and said they would be investigated.

SHIPPING LAW WILL PREVENT SPREAD DISEASE IN CATTLE

Beginning July 1, 1919, the shipment of cattle interstate without having them properly tuberculin tested will be prohibited—with a few exceptions—by a regulation issued by the secretary of agriculture. The enforcement of this new regulation will, it is believed, be of great assistance in preventing the further spread of tuberculosis among live stock, and having the work practically under state and federal supervision at all times will serve to bring about uniformity.

The department of agriculture, through its bureau of animal industry, is now actively cooperating with the state live stock sanitary officials and cattle owners of 42 states in the eradication of tuberculosis from live stock.

Recent legislation in several of the states has made it possible to proceed with the work where heretofore it has been impossible to do so. Federal funds available for the work are insufficient to meet present demands, and now that the cattle owners are finding the work to be of such advantage and importance the demands will increase rapidly.

Most activities are in the "accredited-herd" work with the owners and breeders of purebred herds of cattle who wish to free their herds from tuberculosis and have them placed on the list as "accredited."

GO TO FOREIGN MARKETS IS POLICY OF FORD COMPANY

Brimming full of that confidence which brings success, and that active energy which creates success, the Ford Motor company is establishing assembling plants in Copenhagen, Denmark and in Cadiz, Spain.

The Ford Motor company believes the war is over, that a new dispensation has been established, and that the sooner American manufacturers can align themselves to the new conditions and reach out to meet the greater demands of the world, why, the quicker the havoc wrought by the war will have been effaced. The quicker we can get international business at work, the sooner will the horrors of the great war disappear and the earlier we can reach out our hand of trade to help, the earlier will be the disappearance of hate and enmity between people.

The Ford Motor company believes if you want the foreign market, go to it. Don't wait for it to come to you. Take what you have to sell to the market, and there show its advantages to the people who visit that market and to the people who buy in that market. If you wish foreign trade, become an active, living part in the red blood of that trade. The whole world is a market today for American enterprize, and who realize this truth and make honest efforts to get that trade, will have it.

PRESS CATCHES DEVIL OR ERROR IN MERCHANTS AD

SKAGGS CASH GROCERY HAS RUN ON SUGAR WHEN MISTAKE IS MADE IN PAPER—IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE PRESS WHEN YOU HAVE SOMETHING TO ADVERTISE.

Last Friday morning Sam Kramlich, manager of Skaggs Cash Grocery, picked up the last issue of the American Falls Press and turned to his little three-inch ad at the bottom of column 6, page 8 and read as follows:

"Just received a carload of cane sugar which we can sell at the low price of $10 per 100 pounds."

It was all wrong for the price quoted should have been $10.60 per 100 pounds.

Mr. Kramlich went to the phone and called for 32 and requested the operator to "Make it snappy."

Manager Catches "Devil."

The manager of the Press Publishing Company, Ltd., was unfortunate enough to be nearest the phone when it rang and what Mr. Kramlich said to him wouldn't look the best in print. The short of it is that he got the very devil. But after the manager explained that the ad man was responsible and that if it wasn't the ad man, the make-up man was to blame, Mr. Kramlich kindly consented to let the Press send him a letter of explanation that he could show his customers.

Meant $200.

"That little would have cost us $200 if we had been unable to explain the mistake to our customers," said Mr. Kramlich. "Of course they thought at first that we were advertising falsely to get the minto our store. But the letter explained matters satisfactorily and we were able to fill orders at the intended price of $10.60 for 100 pounds which in itself was an unusually low price."

Mr. Kramlich advertised a real value in the PRESS and got RESULTS. We are sorry for the additional take, but glad for the additional proof that, when you've got the goods and the values, IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

THANK YOU.
