In a burst of penitence little Freddie was telling his mother what a wicked boy he had been. "The other day, mamma," he said, "I found the church door unlocked and I went inside. There wasn't anybody there and I—" "You didn't take anything away did you, son?" she asked. "Worse than that; I—" "Did you mutilate the hymn books or play any tricks of that kind?" "Oh, lots worse than that mamma," sobbed Freddie. I went and sat down in the amen corner and said 'Darn it.' "
