MILITARY RULE IN VOGUE

Thirty Service Men Return and Are Taking Important Place in School Affairs; Basketball Prospects Are Good.

Moscow, Idaho, Jan. 18.—Southern Idaho students play an important role in registration and organization at the state university, which opens with prospects of being the most successful and progressive of all time. Men returning from military duty filled with new hopes and ideals, those who were here are spurred to greater work by the call of greater opportunities.

The only known collection of foreign war posters in the west is in possession of the University of Idaho. Over one hundred posters, direct from Paris, are on display in the library, together with a smaller collection from Australia, Greece, Brazil and China.

The ancient custom of the "wearing of the green" by first year men will again hold sway on the campus, after a brief rest, the youngsters donning the emerald hue on St. Patrick's day, and wearing them until campus day, next May.

The building of the new wing of the administration building has been partially completed, presenting a much needed addition, but funds are lacking for the completion of the good work. All interior work is held up until the required cash is obtained.

President E. H. Lindley and Dean E. J. Iddings, agricultural head, are delegates to the annual convention of agricultural colleges and experiment stations, at Baltimore, Jan. 8 to 11. Dean Iddings will stop at the Denver Livestock show, returning about the 26th of the month.

David R. Porter, national executive of the Student Christian movement, successor to John R. Mott, issued a challenge to university students, last week, to take up the great and necessary work of his organization, which, he says, will be a great factor in world reconstruction.

Reorganized and acting in a larger capacity than before the war, the R. O. T. C. is starting with an impetus that is bound to shove it to the front for a very successful year. The registration is the largest in the history of the school. With practically all men having previous military experience, and many officers and O. T. C. men, the military department can launch into new and more complicated drill movements.

The animal husbandry department of the Agricultural college, with its large and increasing herds of registered stock, is fast making its way to becoming the best department of its kind in the west. The university is proud of the record made at the recent Pacific International Livestock show at Portland, where the beef cattle carried off many first and second prizes, both individual and herd prizes.

Basketball prospects for this season look a big stride when four men from last year's all-northwest basket tossers turned out to form a nucleus of a team which stands good prospects of repeating the 1918 success. Coach Bleamaster holds strong hopes for first honors, and feels that his men will work all the harder, in face of big chances for victory.

Fraternities and sororities wish to announce the pledging of the following south Idaho men and women:

Phi Delta, Theta—Albert Thompson, Boise; Walter Smith and Eugene Hart, Twin Falls.

Kappa Gamma Gamma—Miss Lucie Davis, Boise.

Alpha Kappa Epsilon—Marshall Macey and Marshall Blaine, Boise.

Sigma Nu—John Jimmerson, Payette.

Gamma Phi Beta—Edna Cappa, Blackfoot; Harlene Sartoris, Payette.

Every student registered at the university this quarter was required to take an intelligence test, prepared by the government for an examination of the mental capacity of its draft armies. The test is very exacting, although interesting, and aroused much comment. Grades, to be announced later, are to be attached to each student's record.

Influenza still puts the glimmer on college social activities at Moscow. Churches and theaters operate on the alternate row basis, but public or private dancing is still taboo. Several all college dances have been announced, but the city health officer fails to see the light of the dancing bug, and the danceless spend their spare evenings otherwise, probably studying.

WAR REMAKES ONCE "LOUNGE LIZARD" INTO A "REGULAR FELLER"

London, Dec. 29.—(By Mail.)—"You can't always stage a world war to woo a fellow from his lotus-illies!"

The remark came from a young British officer, commenting on the difference the war had made to his manhood.

Four years ago he was a social lapdog for Mayfair's doll women, with no ambition but to lead an aimless life and seek popularity. He was just a makeshift of a man.

Then when war broke out the doll women who had hitherto looked upon him as "such a nice boy" began to hint at white feathers, he felt his opportunity slipping from him, and in desperation joined the army.

Removed from all his accustomed comfort and adulation for a time he floundered, but after a while his old desire for popularity reasserted itself.

The problem that presented itself to his mind was—how to become popular among all these rough-and-ready men? They scoffed at his nice manners, jeered at his effeminacy, and often held up to ridicule his carefully thought out attempts at friendliness.

Eventually he saw himself as he really was, and resolutely set about to rectify matters, to build himself a character and to form for himself an ideal.

Today his whole division knows him for a splendid fighter, a loyal friend, and an all-round "regular feller"; but he declares that he owes the division a debt of gratitude, for it was they who "beat him into it."

He has made many friends among his men and looks back in wonderment at the thing he was in those old satisfied days. There is not much likelihood that he will ever degenerate into his old position as a drawing room ornament.
