Club Meetings

A LUNCHEON.
One of the prettiest entertainments of the week was a luncheon at which Mrs. J. T. Hutton was hostess to the members of the Erthstane Club at her home in Ogden street yesterday. Several members were present and Mrs. Prosler of Ottawa, Ill., Mrs. Hutton's house guest, and Mrs. Alexander Skolkowitz were the invited guests. A beautifully appointed luncheon of three courses was served at one o'clock. The tables in the dining room were decorated with Conillon candle sticks and Kilmer roses to carry out a color scheme of pink and white. In the parlors there were large bunches of roses. Following the serving of the luncheon the guests returned to the parlors where the afternoon was spent with sewing for the poor in the city. A great deal of work was accomplished. Music was one of the social features of the afternoon. Mrs. R. B. MacAloon will give an afternoon party Tuesday, January 30th at her home in Doty street, honoring the members of the Erthstane Club. The luncheon yesterday took the place of the regular bi-monthly meeting.

CHURCH FEDERATION MEETING
The Church Federation Meeting was not largely attended on last Monday afternoon at the Methodist church in Indiana Harbor. And another misfortune is that so few preachers in the Calumet region have watches, and therefore can not get to the same place at the same time. The only important action taken was to appoint different ones to secure in the various localities the number of saloons, gambling places and houses of prostitution, to find out how many men in the different plants are working seven days in the week. This is not a Sunday question, but "one rest day in seven" question.
The next meeting will be held in the Congregational church in East Chicago next Tuesday, Jan. 22, at 2 p. m.

CHILDREN'S KEEPSAKES.
How very few parents ever think of taking care of little treasures belonging to their children, putting them away until the child's sense of responsibility is so educated as to give a value to the article in his eyes! One of the things that should always be done, when photographs are taken, is to put away one to be kept for the child through life. No matter how often a picture is taken, one should be set aside for the child. How often, when a dear child dies, there is lamentation that there is no picture of him or her, because some has been kept in the family and the picture was not of sufficient value to others to be preserved. I have in my possession a little knife, fork and spoon, given to my little girl when a baby, by one who is no more than a memory, and as soon as the tiny little daughter becomes "well-gone," the set will be passed to her. Many other belongings of the other, kept for her since her own babyhood is passed on to the babies of her own household. Of every picture taken of her there was a copy kept, and she saw herself, just as she was at the age of her own little children. A mother should keep bits of clothing—scraps of calico, gingham, and other cotton goods, and of woollens as well, which went to make up the child's wardrobe, and these may, later on, be made into "patchwork" either for or by the child. One mother I know gives to her little daughter a piece of china or glassware, or something of lasting quality, on every birthday or "gift" day, and the child is taught to keep these as treasures against her day of need. Among my own most precious belongings is a solid silver butterknife, received as a premium at a fair on some stock exhibit, by my father, half a century ago, and kept for the baby girl. There is also a little old-fashioned coal oil lamp, the first our family ever had, and because I admired it so much, it was passed on to me. The sight of it brings back visions and memories so plainly that they seem realities of today, instead of the long dead past.

The Surgery of Light

The Most Marvelous Discovery of the Last Decade.

A Hammond Man, Heir to Its Good Pleasure.

Perhaps science has never been marked by an advance so great as the successful treatment of diseases by the light treatment. Cancer, Lupus, Psoriasis and many skin diseases, that only a few years ago, were thought to be incurable, or amenable only to the surgeon's knife, are now practically mastered by the X-ray, the violet ray and the high-frequency lights. The physicians of our town have done well their part, in equipping themselves with modern appliances. In the office of Dr. Leedy, 22 & 23 Rimbach Bldg. over the Lion Store, Hammond, is to be found a veritable light institute as well as other mechanical devices for curing diseases. Every form of electricity is here turned to a therapeutic use. It is not at all strange that electricity should have such therapeutic value, the only wonder is, that its utility was not known to the medical profession sooner. Eczema, acna and other skin diseases that were formerly treated with plasters, pasts and lotions with very indifferent success are now readily and completely cured by some of the light treatments just mentioned. Following is a testimonial of a Hammond man who had tried numerous old time methods and had been treated by doctors who do not employ the later methods.
