AN EVENING PARTY.
The home of Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Bell in South Hohman street was the scene of a very pretty social function last evening when the members of the Alpha Phi Club and their husbands met for a bridge party. The flowers chosen in the decoration scheme were roses and the prevailing colors were pink and white. The evening was spent with cards and several games of bridge whist were played. Music was also one of the entertaining features. At the conclusion of the card games a beautifully appointed luncheon of three courses was served. The covers were laid at the small tables in the parlors. In two weeks on Friday, February 2nd, Mrs. W. A. Buchanan will give an afternoon party at her home in South Hohman street, Mrs. Buchanan will entertain the club members at a thimble party.

A MASQUERADE PARTY.
One of the enjoyable entertainments of last evening was a Masquerade Party at which Mrs. A. H. Cross entertained the members of the M. W. G. Club, their husbands and a few friends. The evening was spent in a delightful way with music and games until eleven o'clock when a two course luncheon was served. Some of the masquerade costumes worn were very pretty and attractive and others were comical. Guessing who the many guests were was one of the enjoyable features of the evening. Miss Cross entertained the following: Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Bonar, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kinsey, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stafford, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Kale, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. The children of the kindergarten entertained with songs after which there were short talks by several of the club members and teachers. Miss Anna Grady, the art supervisor and Miss Norma Locklin, teacher of domestic science in the Wallace school talked on Sewing and Domestic Science in the schools. Mr. C. M. 200 years and live the customs, say the speeches, wear the clothes and ape the affectations of English society of that scintillating period. Yet the members of the cast caught the spirit of Goldsmith and reflected it splendidly, surprisingly well. They became the laced tops, the be-wigged beaux, the quaintly-costumed, beauty-spotted dames of society, better acquainted with the friseur than the preacher. The acting was well done. Could more be said?

They lived the charming life of the inmates of the manor, the rollicking life of the tap room and they lived it well. Their training was remarkable, even with the consideration of their adaptability and pliability. Miss Hauk's arduous efforts, for it was not a small task, were richly rewarded, and her work is a credit to the versatility of the educative progress in the Hammond high school.

One of the most delightful theatrical surprises that it has ever been the good fortune of an audience to witness was occasioned last night at the Hammond theatre in the production of Oliver Goldsmith's deliciously satiric comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," by the pupils of the Hammond high school.

In describing amateur theatrical productions it is quite customary for newspapers, with no desire to precipitate gloom for the young thespians participating, to say that the members of the production "carried out their parts worthy of professionals" and let it go at that. It is, however, impossible to dismiss the performance last night without hearty praise and actual commendation.

There have been particularly good plays given by the high school comedy company in past years, but in ensemble none of them have ever been equalled by "She Stoops to Conquer." It capped the climax in the history of high school theatricals in Hammond, for the audience of the city, was not large, but it was visibly impressed before the curtain had been up a few minutes that the production was out of the ordinary and that a master hand had in charge the training of the young people, the stage settings, the stage business, the adherence to faithfulness of detail in furnishing the production, scenically and on costume.

The work of Miss Grace Eaton Hauk, the dressmaker, stood out like a cameo throughout the five-act Elizabethan comedy. It is no small task for present day boys and girls to be set back

A SLEIGHING PARTY.
On Friday evening, January 18th the Christian Endeavor Society of the Pine Street Presbyterian church enjoyed the pleasure of a sleigh ride to Indiana Harbor. Here refreshments were prepared at Sternberg's. All of the party, twenty-six in number were seated at the long dining table. Many toasts were given bringing out a great deal of new talent and adding much merriment to the occasion. After dinner preparations were made for the return trip by way of Whiting. By the hearty nature of their out of door singing during the entire ride the young people indicated how readily they enjoyed braving crisp zero weather. The next social occasion of the society will be followed by a twenty-five cent oyster supper on Friday evening, January 25th. The program will be at the Pine street church and the invitation to attend is open to all.

PREPARE FOR EMERGENCY

The thoughtful Hammond housewife before retiring these nights takes the precaution of setting aside a bucketful or two of water to be used in case of emergency the following morning, when she finds that needle ice at the intake is interfering with the regular water supply.

"Needle ice" comes like the proverbial thief in the night," said Superintendent Kasper of the pumping station today. "We never know when it is going to come, but we always regard these offshore winds during the winter time unfavorable, and for all I know we may have needle ice tomorrow morning."

Thomas Filas, the nine-year-old West Hammond truant, who has been arrested by the police a number of times on different charges, was arrested again this morning by Officer Briezke at Michigan avenue and Sohi street, and as yet no charge has been filed against him.

His young brother, Eddie Filas, 7 years old, was with him at the time of his arrest, but he slipped away from the officer and as yet has not been located. The elder Filas boy admitted this morning that he and his brother tried to break into a house on Michigan avenue.

It is learned that the youngsters have not been staying home of late and have been spending their nights in different hallways of the stores in Hammond. The police are at a loss to
