FASHIONS FOR MIDSUMMER.

By Maude Hall.
New York, July 10.—Novelty, novelty, always novelty is the cry of the women of fashion. Brains, brains, brains, always brains, is the reply of the dressmakers who hear this cry.

Money, money, money, is the wall of the women of average means who stands and admires, but cannot buy many of the beautiful things buried at the rich sisterhood in response to their cry for novelty. So there is the situation in a nutshell—with one point to be added.

Most important, too, is the one point, for upon it hangs the salvation of the poor woman; for even the woman with money for immediate needs finds many of the smart clothes without her limit this summer. The point in question, however, is that debt of gratitude the mass of women owe to the manufacturer for producing materials and trimmings that make it possible to duplicate the rich clothes worn by wealthy fashion leaders, without spending in an entire season what they put in one frock or waist. Without stopping to make an excuse for it, one records, with all the heartlessness of cold fact the statement that some of the midsummer blouses in combinations of hand embroidery and rare lace sell at $125 are considered bargains. Take an appropriate skirt and hat, to say nothing of the other accessories that go with it, and imagine the cost of a toilet in which this blouse figures.

But down to earth. There are stripes and checks, figures and dots "just as good," with apologies to the advertising department, in effect at least as their high-priced predecessors. It is surprising how many beautiful voiles, cotton etamines, crepes, linens, etc., can be bought for less than twenty-five cents a yard this season. When trimmed with self-covered buttons or when their own designs are cross-arranged, as in the case of stripes, especially, in smart effect, really no other decoration is needed.

refreshments were served. The next meeting of the members will occur in two weeks, on Wednesday evening, July 23.

Saturday evening the members of the Dorcas Lodge of Rebeckahs will meet in the I. O. O. F. Hall, in State street, for their regular weekly meeting a class of candidates will be initiated during the evening.

The members of Hammond Temple, No. 73, Pythian Sisters, will meet in the K. of P. Hall, in South Hohman street Friday evening, for their regular semi-monthly meeting. A feature of the meeting will be the installation of officers.
