WHAT TO EAT TO KEEP WARM

If You Would Keep the Human Furnace Burning Briskly This Winter, Here Are the Foods to Stoke it With.

BY CAROLINE COE. In making a properly balanced winter menu for a family, the foods which supply plenty of heat must be remembered first of all. To measure body-heat, scientists have invented a unit called "calory"—the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one gram of water one degree centigrade—and it is estimated that between 2,500 and 3,500 calories per day are necessary for the average person. Of this amount of heat, about one-half should be supplied by carbohydrates, one-sixth by protein, and one-third by fat.

HOW MANY CALORIES DO YOU NEED?

Table showing approximate calory-need of persons doing various kinds of work. Categories include Woman, light muscular work (2,400), Woman, moderate muscular work (2,700), Man, without muscular work (2,700), Man, light muscular work (3,000), Man, moderate muscular work (3,500), Man, hard work (4,500). Note: Children of about eight years require half the food of an adult, and when they reach the age of sixteen they eat about the same quantity as an adult.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The Social Twelve club was entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Scott, 709 South End av. The members made up four tables at cards and favors went to Mrs. C. M. Hildebrand and Mrs. George Moore. Mrs. Otto Nabicht received the guest favor. The club will meet in two weeks with Mrs. R. C. DeBow, 312 S. Taylor st.

GIRLS TO HAVE LEAGUE

Basketball Stars at Y. W. C. A. Will Stage Games. A Sunday school basket ball league for girls, similar to that for boys, is to be organized under the auspices of the Y. W. C. A. Preliminary plans for it were made Wednesday evening at a meeting of the physical directors' committee at the association building. Letters will be sent out immediately to the pastors of the various churches asking them to cooperate and teams will be formed among the girls of the various Sunday school classes and a series of games will be played at the Y. W. C. A., whether or not the members of the various teams are members of the association.

and the acids of fruit are more invaluable. So, on the winter menu, there should be listed vegetables, such as beets, carrots, turnips, parsnips, onions and cabbage. Of course, there are also the green vegetables which can be obtained throughout the winter and which should not be forgotten—celery, lettuce, parsley and water-cress, for instance.

Different Food Values. Among the fruits, oranges, lemons and grape fruit are valuable for the citric acid which they contain, while the iron, potash, lime and other chemical substances contained in grapes make that fruit one of the stand-bys of the winter diet. And the cranberry also should be served frequently in winter because of its value as a blood and liver tonic.

Among the accessories of a meal, meat broths may well be included, for, though it is now known that they have practically no nutritive value, they are nevertheless very good appetizers. The functions of a true appetizer is to stimulate the flow of saliva and other juices and thus insure thorough digestion. The spices and condiments, however, which are often taken as appetizers, should not appear frequently during the winter, because the injurious substances which they contain are liable to clog the kidneys. There may be more excuse for them in the days of summer perspiration, when many of the poisons are eliminated through the pores of the skin. The carefully balanced winter menu is not complete if the water supply is neglected, for water is as important to the human heating apparatus as it is to a hot water heating system in a building. Much water, of course, should not be taken with the meals, but enough should be taken at other times to make about a 4 1/2-pint a day.

Tomorrow the famous medical authority, Dr. Leonard Keene Hirschberg, will outline a proper winter diet for children in the News-Times.

DR. THOMSON'S EYE TALK. (TALK NO. 229.)

Hooks. Some ladies wear eye glasses with neither chain nor cord. While the glasses are upon the face this is perfectly satisfactory, but when you wish to take them off there is no place to put them. If you are shopping it is a bother to put them in the case and take them out every time you wish to use them. It is not always convenient to carry them in your hand. For this purpose an eye glass hook is a decided convenience. You can hang the glasses upon your dress and have them always ready for instant use. Some of my customers have a hook for every dress. They are neat and inexpensive. You can get them in black enamel, nickel, silver, gilt, gold filled or solid gold. You can get them either plain or engraved. I have them.

New $25 Coats for $10. Here's the Reason. Our Ready-to-Wear Department was Cleaned-Out last Saturday. We realized, however, that Coats were in demand and that we were losing sales. So, we wired our buyers to hurry some more Coats along—and that's about all—save the one important fact that our buyers purchased away low, so low that we can sell a $25 Ural Lamb or Persian Lamb Coat for $10.

This young woman is not supposed to be wearing one of the Ural or Persian Lamb Coats we're offering at $10—but she is wearing a good warm coat quite like some we're offering at underprices.
