Adele Garrison's New REVELATIONS OF A WIFE "THEIR SECOND HONEYMOON"

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN MADGE AND ROBERT SAVARIN WENT FOR A WALK ALONE TOGETHER.

Robert Savarin and I stood side by side on the veranda of the old Brennan house at Marvin, mutely watching the taxi which was bearing Dicky, Lillian Underwood and Lillian's little girl, Marion, to the railroad station in time for the city-bound train. It was not until the taxi became a mere speck in the distance that we turned as if by mutual consent—although still saying nothing—and went into the living room.

I did not know what Robert Savarin's thoughts were, but my own brain was busy with the unexpected complication of Lillian's life-problem which her sudden and ridiculous jealousy of my friendship with the artist had brought to me. I knew that Lillian herself, big, frank, loyal woman that she is, was not aware of the nature of her feelings toward me, and that when she did realize it she would stamp it out with inflexible firmness. But the look of resentment, unconscious though it was, with which she had answered Robert Savarin's reference to asking my advice had revealed to me as by a lightning flash the difficulties of helping to solve Lillian's problems.

Dicky's unreasoning jealousy, which always greets the most casual acquaintance of mine with any man, was already beginning to simmer against Robert Savarin. But I did not think the attack would be as serious as others he had had. In the first place, Mr. Savarin is nearly as old as my own father. In the second place, Dicky has a great reverence for the elder artist's genius, and, in the third place, Robert Savarin's interest in Lillian Underwood was so plainly in evidence that Dicky could not fail to see it soon.

"What Do You Mean?" I had been thinking so intently of the mental worries of my husband and of my dearest friend that I failed to hear Robert Savarin when he first spoke to me after entering the living room. When he repeated his question he was smiling. "Would it inconvenience you, Mrs. Graham, to have a walk with me?" he asked. "It really is too glorious a day to spend indoors, and I fancy I should like to see a bit of the country out here. Besides, I shall not have so good an opportunity soon again."

"Why, what do you mean, Mr. Savarin?" I faltered, perceiving, or fancying I did, an undercurrent of meaning beneath his words. "Surely there will be plenty of other opportunities for you to see our neighborhood in the time you are to spend with us. But I shall be very glad to go with you this morning, for indeed it is too wonderful a day to spend indoors."

"There was that about the smile with which he answered me that made a feeling as of pity clutch my heart."

"Dear lady," he said. "It will not be possible for me to stay at your home the length of time I had planned. Of course I shall attend Mrs. Underwood's dinner tonight, but even at the risk of seeming ungracious I must start back home tomorrow or the next day at the latest."

"But—why—?" I began, startled and a bit worried because our plans had been made for a week's entertainment of the artist. "I will tell you out of doors," he returned. "Won't you get your wraps and take that walk now? I feel as if I should stifle if I stayed under a roof this morning."

There was about his manner a something that lent wings to my feet as I ran upstairs for my wraps. It would be an injustice to describe it as a touch of wildness, and yet that was the thought of it which came to my mind as I hurried on a heavy sweater and a cap, which were all the day required for a brisk walk.

A Wise Thing. But restless as there undeniably was, and I wondered vaguely and anxiously if there were any danger of his losing again the delicate mental balance restored to him so short a time. I am a good walker, but I found that I had all I could do to keep up with Mr. Savarin, who, evidently forgetting his usual courtesy, strode along the hard-packed winding road as though he were alone. It was a glorious March day, and, although the air was brisk, there was the promise of spring in it. If I had not had to rush along so fast, I should have thoroughly enjoyed the walk.

I had purposely taken him along the road to the rustic bridge spanning the beautiful little brook Dicky and I had explored on our first visit to Marvin. It was the prettiest bit of woods and water anywhere near Marvin; and I knew that the artist soul of Robert Savarin would rejoice in it.

The sight of the clear little stream wandering through the trees seemed to calm the unnatural restlessness of the man. He stopped short at sight of it and gazed at it for a long time. Then he turned to me abruptly. "You have gone a wise thing, Mrs. Graham. A look at a brook or a lake always calms me when I most need it. This has exceeded the devotion of the spirit. Will you take a cold, do you think, if we stop here a little while? I want to tell you a story and to ask your counsel."

leaving the city. Covers were laid for 12 at a table delightfully appointed with spring flowers. Dinner was served at 5 o'clock.

A delightful 1 o'clock luncheon of today was that at which the Misses Lillian Anderson, Minnie Suchanek and Mamie Kerner were joint hostesses in honor of Miss Agnes Rupert, whose marriage to Walter Blasensym of Indianapolis will occur on April 19; and Miss Rose E. Bennett, a bride of the coming summer. The affair took place in the pink parlor of the Oliver hotel, where the guests, who numbered 18, were seated at an oval table charmingly appointed in a color motif of pink and white. An empire basket filled with sweet peas formed the attractive centerpiece and dainty corsages, fashioned of the same flower, served as guest favors. Following luncheon an afternoon of "509" was enjoyed by the guests.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Rosander and Andrew Lundstrom will occur this evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Rosander, 1525 Chapin st. The couple will be attended by the bride's sister, Miss Esther Rosander and Ivar Lundstrom. The bridesmaid will wear an attractive gown of dark blue satin, and will carry a corsage of pink and white sweetpeas, and the bride will wear a gown of Alice blue georgette crepe, with a corsage of sweet peas. The Rev. Gottfrid Olson will perform the ceremony in the presence of 20 guests.

In compliment to Miss Fannie Jain, whose marriage to Robert Miller of Chicago will take place in April, Miss Esther Kirkpatrick, 1921 Dumont av., entertained 12 guests at a pleasing dinner party and miscellaneous shower Friday evening. A color motif of pink and white was effected in the table appointments, and a miniature bride constituted the attractive centerpiece. Those present were Mrs. Leroy Reed, Mrs. A. R. Jain, and the Misses Jain, Florence Bennett, Edna Chilson, Neva Steele, Doris Steele, Irene Mitchell, Mabel Martin, Elsie Showalter, and Bessie Calder.

Mrs. O. G. Harding, 810 Leland av., assisted by Mrs. Daniel Rich, was hostess to the Woman's Missionary society of Westminster Presbyterian church Friday afternoon. Mrs. Edward Beech was in charge of the program, the subject of which was "China," and Mrs. L. C. Barter and Miss Isabel Barter presented discussions on the study topic, after which an interesting letter was read from Miss Alma Doda, serving as a missionary in China. Pleasing vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Norton Reed. On the first Friday in May Mrs. R. F. Augustine, Riverside dr., will entertain the society.

Announcement has been made of the program for the St. Joseph county W. C. T. U. institute to be held in this city on Monday afternoon and evening. Sessions of the institute will take place in Westminster Presbyterian church at 2:30 and 7:30 o'clock, and the program to be presented at the afternoon meeting is as follows: Devotionals, Mrs. C. C. Beyrer; address, "Women in Industry," by Mrs. E. B. Harris; discussion, "Is Conservation Still Necessary and Why?" by Mrs. W. M. Weld; "The Union Signal," by Mrs. Charles Hopkins. In the evening the program will consist of the following features: Selection by Westminster orchestra; address by institute leader, Mrs. Mattie Cammack Gibson of Jonesboro, Ind.; state lectures for the W. C. T. U. The Tuesday sessions of the institute will be held at the Methodist church of Osceola, Ind.

Members and friends of the Penelope club met Friday night with Mrs. M. Kemerley, 701 N. Michigan st., in the celebration of Mrs. Kemerley's birthday anniversary. The evening was spent socially with games, music and contests. Piano and vocal solos were rendered by the Misses Ruth and Mildred Kemerley. The hostess was presented with several pretty gifts as remembrances of the occasion. Luncheon was served.

Mrs. Charles Imel was re-elected chairman of the department of philanthropy and civics of the Progress club at its regular meeting Friday afternoon. Other officers chosen were: Mrs. W. M. Weld, vice chairman; Mrs. E. M. Anders, secretary, and Mrs. William Bender, treasurer. Appearing on the program at the meeting was Miss Florence Weld who gave an interesting and practical talk on "Food for the Family Group," in which she pointed out that in the planning of menus consideration must be given to the food value, selection and preparation and service. She cited practical statistics concerning healthful foods, emphasizing the need for proper quantity, quality and variety, saying that "good feeding means good thinking." The department will hold its next meeting in two weeks.

The new text book, which is to be studied for the next six months, "The Path of Labor," was the subject of discussion at the regular meeting of the Woman's society of the First Baptist church held Friday afternoon with Mrs. G. W. Kopf, 427 W. Madison st. Mrs. U. S. Davis gave a review of "The Call for Service." The monthly social meeting of the society will take place on the evening of April 25 at the church.

The Indiana club Friday evening was the scene of a delightful dinner dance which followed the annual election of officers for the Married Folks' Dancing club. All the retiring officers were there to express their best wishes to the incoming officers for a successful year in the history of the club.

Music for the dance program was furnished by Donahue's orchestra, and 40 couples were present to enjoy the dancing. The retiring officers are F. A. Stephenson, president, and Mrs. Frank Warner, secretary, the vice president, Charles Harper, having been re-elected to that office for the ensuing year.

The retiring officers gave brief sketches of the activities of the club during the past year, and thanked the members for the hearty cooperation shown, which they declared was so instrumental in furnishing the good entertainments which they had enjoyed.

The following officers were elected for the next year: Fred A. Bryan, president; Mrs. Edgar Johnson, secretary, and Charles Harper, treasurer.

The Woman's Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church held its regular meeting Friday afternoon in the church parlors. The devotionals were conducted by Mrs. J. G. Yeagley; Mrs. J. F. McGowan had the news budget; telling of the progress made in the missionary work all over the world. The work of the Harriet House girls' school, located at Vagkok, Siam, was described by Mrs. H. M. Crow. Mrs. Emil Hannan gave an account of the need of funds for the hospital at Lolofof, Siam. Miss Gertrude Brown explained the financing of the jubilee fund, for which it was announced at the meeting, $416 has already been subscribed by members of the society. Mrs. F. M. Booth, Mrs. F. C. Kooz, Mrs. J. M. Shidler and Mrs. H. R. Duckwith acted as hostesses.

"An Awakened Interest in Semi-Precious Stones" was the subject chosen by Miss Virginia Tutt for a very interesting talk before the members of the current history department of the South Bend Woman's club, Friday afternoon. Other topics that excited quite as much interest was "The Land of Cherry Blossoms," discussed by Mrs. John Hunter, and "The British in the Promised Land," by Mrs. E. J. Claire. Several piano numbers were
