WANT MORE POLICEMEN

East Siders Say They Are in Need of at Least Five More.

The East Side wants more policemen and an effort will be made next month to get Chief Shippy to put on at least five additional patrolmen in the territory which comes under the jurisdiction of the East Side station. At present there are thirty-seven men in the station. Of this number sixteen travel beats and the remaining twenty-one are superior officers or operators. With sixteen men traveling beats this only gives the East Side, Irontdale and Hegewisch eight men each evening to patrol the long, lonesome beats.

The population covered by the East Side station will reach in the neighborhood of 30,000, and to cover this territory with only eight men days and the same number nights, is looked upon as preposterous by other officials through the city.

Yesterday Lieutenant Moore said that the East Side alone ought to have five more men to adequately cover the territory, but stated that he would be satisfied if he could get five more men. When a person takes into consideration that an officer has to travel from One Hundredth street to One Hundred and Eighteenth street, part of the way with bad streets, it is no wonder that a policeman never can be found when he is wanted.

If Chief Shippy would only come to the East Side and personally take a ride over the territory and see the large amount of work for the small number of men, it is certain that the East Side would receive a new batch of cops.

TOURIST'S MAIDEN TRIP

Carries 200 "Grasshoppers" From South Chicago to Riverdale.

The first trip of the "Tourist," one of the South Shore Outing and Transportation company's boats, was a huge success and if every other trip of the steamer is on a par with last Saturday's, the success of the new company is assured with no room for doubt.

With over two hundred people on board, representing Swamp No. 1, Modern Order of Grasshoppers, the "Tourist" pulled out of South Chicago for Riverdale park at Riverdale, Ill., where the evening was spent in dancing and other forms of amusement.

The return trip was made, leaving Riverdale at 12 o'clock and steaming in the South Chicago harbor at 1 o'clock. On board the boat, both going and coming, a fine vaudeville entertainment was given and was immensely enjoyed by the Grasshoppers.

The boat was in charge of Captain Long on her maiden trip. The "South Shore," the senior boat, owned by the South Shore Outing and Transportation company, will make her initial trip next Sunday when she will carry a crowd of local people to Michigan City.

VAUDETTE IS BEING VASTLY IMPROVED

Smith's theater, formerly known as the Vaudeite, located at 249 Ninety-second street, is undergoing a complete remodeling this week and much is being done on the inside to make the theater present an attractive appearance. New seven foot aisles have been put in, the ceiling has been changed from common wallpaper to attractive steel and in fact everything in the building is being given a thorough renovation and redecoration.

Mr. Smith will open up the new theater next Saturday, at which all vaudeites will be presented with carnations as souvenirs. Later in the season it is the intention of Mr. Smith to stage several comedy-dramas and vaudeville acts.

Officer Suerth last Friday noticed that a dog belonging to Theo. Suerth refused to stand for this and arrested Barble, taking him into court where he was fined $2 and costs before Judge Foster.

Boilermaker Is Injured.

Ernest Huddelson, a boilermaker living at 9555 Avenue M, and employed in the Hill Boiler works at One Hundred and Seventh street and Avenue N, was severely injured this morning. He had been at work only fifteen minutes.

Huddelson was standing beside a hoisting grade, which at the time was lifting a piece of iron weighing 200 pounds. When the iron was half way up the crane chain snapped, leaving the iron to drop. It fell upon Huddelson, who by this time was standing squarely underneath. The iron struck his head and shoulders and bruised his entire body. He was immediately removed to the South Chicago hospital, where an examination was made to find if any of the injuries would be fatal. Huddelson has a wife and one child.

The Real Man

By MARTHA COBB SANFORD. Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Polly was to take part in an amateur play.

"It's such fun," she announced on the evening of the first rehearsal, "to act with real men! At school, you know, well, at school we didn't have any real men."

The "real men" laughed. There were three of them. Two were old friends and admirers of Polly. The third, Bradley Rogers, she approved the moment he was introduced to her.

"Well," asked Polly gayly, looking over the printed cast in her hand, "which of you is my lover?"

Solemnly, with hands on their hearts, all three bowed.

"You are all very silly," said Polly, blushing. "Now, please be serious. Which of you is to be 'Captain Wheeler, Claire's lover, absent on the field?'" she continued, reading from the play.

"I am cast for that unfortunate part," Bert Crawford announced.

"Unfortunate?" queried Polly, and she raised her pretty eyebrows haughtily.

"Unfortunate," Bert hastened to explain, "because 'absent on the field' for two whole acts, you notice, gives these other fellows too much chance to cut me out."

"Oh," smiled Polly graciously, "then Mr. Marshall and Mr. Rogers are rivals for my hand, too—Claire's hand, I mean."

"No; haven't the pleasure," sighed Jim Marshall. "I'm only your brother."

"Never mind, Jim," said Polly comfortingly. "I'll be a real sweet sister to you. And what are you, Mr. Rogers?"

"Your father," answered Rogers lachrymally.

Polly found the admission exceedingly amusing.

"But what possible chance do my father and brother have of cutting you out?" she asked Bert suddenly.

"Oh," explained Bert carelessly, "I meant they'll cut me out with the audience. No chance to win any bouquets and that sort of thing."

"But you'll win me. I mean—what's her name?—Claire."

"Oh, I'll come out strong in the finish," Bert returned confidently, at which Jim shot him a look that escaped Polly's notice. It did not escape Rogers' observation, however, and he smiled at the thought of the fun to come behind the scenes.

"Who's to be my 'girl chum, Natalie?'" asked Polly, again consulting the printed cast.

"Mrs. Rogers," Bert answered. "And she'll be dandy in that part too. Where is she tonight, Brad?"

"Couldn't come. The baby had the croup or something or other."

Polly wheeled around suddenly on the piano stool and faced Rogers.

"Do you mean to say," she asked accusingly, "that you don't know what's the matter with the baby?"

Rogers, taken by surprise, looked very much embarrassed.

He began to stammer an explanation, but got no further than "Well, you see, Miss Noyes," when the "prompter" arrived and the reading over of parts and the studying out of stage business began in earnest.

As the rehearsals of the play progressed Polly found them absorbing beyond all her expectations. As it happened, Mrs. Rogers, owing to the baby's illness, had not been able to take the part of Natalie after all, and Elsie Williams, Polly's intimate girl friend, was prevailed upon to try it.

This change in the cast, simple as it seemed, was the cause of other changes far less simple.

For one thing, Bert Crawford, whom
