

From Chambers's Journal. AFTER THE BATTLE.

The drums are muffled; the bugles are still. There's a pause in the valley—a halt on the hill. And bearers of standards swerve back with a thrill. Where sheaves of the dead bar the way? For a great field is reaped, Heaven's garners to fill. And stern Death holds his harvest to-day.

There's a voice in the wind like a spirit's low cry— 'Tis the rustle of cloth soundings—and who shall reply? For those whose wan faces glare white to the sky, With eyes fixed so steadfast and dimly, As they wait the last trump which they may not delay. Whose hands clutch the sword-hilt so grimly?

The brave heads, late lifted, are solemnly bowed, And the riderless chargers stand quivering and cowed. And the funeral requiem is chanted aloud, The groans of the death-stricken drowning; While Victory looks on like a queen, pale and proud, Who waits till the morning her crowning.

There is no mocking blazon as clay sinks to clay; The vain points of the peace time are all swept away. In the terrible face of the dread battle day; Nor collars nor shroudings are here; Only relics that lay where thickest the fray— A rent casque and a headless spear.

Far away, tramp on tramp, peals the march of the foe Like a storm wave's retreating, spent, fitful and slow. With a sound like their spirits that faint as they go. By yon red glowing river, whose waters Shall darken with sorrow the land where they flow. To the eyes of her desolate daughters, They are fled! they are gone; but oh! not as they came;

In the pride of the numbers they staked on the game, Never more shall they stand in the vanguard of fame, Never lit the gleamed sword which they drew; Never more shall they boast of a glorious name, Never march with the lead and the true.

Hon. Mr. Julian in the Field.

Hon. Geo. W. Julian, who has just returned home, is already on the stump urging the people to enlist. In a speech a few days ago at Dublin, in the Fifth Indiana Congressional District, he told the people he was emphatically in favor of using all the legitimate means within the reach of the Government for the speedy termination of this war. He would no longer have loyal men guard the homes and property of rebels, while our men are sick and dying for shelter, or starving for bread, but he would subsidize our men and horses on the provisions of the rebels, and use their slaves in every way possible that would ameliorate the condition of our soldiers, and as a reward for their faithfulness, would guarantee unto them the rights of the Declaration of Independence. [Nat. Republican.]
