

HARLAN'S BIRTHDAY

Dean of the Supreme Court Is Now Seventy-seven Years of Age.

HE LOOKS YEARS YOUNGER

Washington, June 2.—In perfect health and looking many years younger, John Marshall Harlan, associate justice of the United States supreme court, quietly celebrated the seventy-seventh anniversary of his birth. During his long career, 33 years of which have been spent on the supreme bench Justice Harlan has led an eventful life. Born in Kentucky, he early began to study law, and was admitted to the bar in 1853. He served in the Union army during the civil war, and was appointed brigadier general of volunteers before he retired. He was once nominated for congress and twice for governor of Kentucky on the republican ticket, but was defeated.

In 1877, when he was 44 years of age, he was appointed by President Hayes as an associate justice of the supreme court, since which time his judicial reputation has grown until he ranks among the foremost jurists of the day. Justice Harlan was asked today about his retirement from the bench. He replied that he hoped to remain there the rest of his natural life, or until he felt unequal to perform the work. He has known personally Presidents Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt. He and President Taft are intimate. Chief Justice Waite, Justices Swayne, Story, Clifford, Bradley, Hunt, Woods, Matthews, Gray, Lamar, Davis, Fields, Brewer and Peckham have died during his term of office.

The greater part of the day was spent by the justice in saying good-bye to his friends and getting ready for his annual vacation, which starts tomorrow. He said: "I am going to Point-au-Pie, popularly called Murray Bay, 90 miles below Quebec, on the St. Lawrence River. I intend to pass the summer mostly in the open air and playing golf, the best form of amusement and exercise ever devised for middle-aged and old men. I hope I never get too old to play the game."

The Caddie's Comment. "Yes, sir." The caddie regarded the corrugated turf at the tee with a thoughtful frown. "Yes, sir, since you ask me the question, there are worse players than you." "I thought so; I thought so," said the golfer. "But they have the sense," added the expert, "not to play golf, but to stay at home and do first saving."—London Answers.

BEVERIDGE ATTACKED

Stand of Senator on Statehood Bill Meets Disapproval of the President.

TAFT WANTS IT PASSED

(American News Service) Washington, June 2.—President Taft last night sent for Senator Bailey, of Texas and Senator Dick of Ohio and proposed that they join him in a plan to throw over Beveridge and pass the house statehood bill instead of the bill as amended by the senate. Taft indulged in a lot of abuse of Beveridge. Bailey and Dick were told by the president that the passage of the bill would probably mean two more democratic senators but he (Taft) did not think it meant more than two. Arizona, he believed, may choose democrats, but New Mexico will elect republicans. Bailey and Dick promised to try to get votes to run over Beveridge, but both senate and house leaders reiterated today that the statehood bill cannot be passed.

THE HORSEY MAN.

He Was Pressed into Service as an Art Critic. A London horse dealer famous for his expert treatment of "whistling," "roaring," "bucking" and other equine ailments had a friend who was a picture buyer. The latter, hearing that one of James MacNeill Whistler's works had been put on sale, was hurrying to New Bond street to have a look at it.

Meeting the horsey man on his way, he stated that he was going to have a look at a Whistler and inquired jocularly if his friend knew anything about Whistlers. "If I know anything in the world it is what constitutes a genuine whistler," replied the man, greatly to the astonishment of the first, who had never heard of such an infirmity of the horse.

"Come along, then," said he, "and I'll get your opinion on one that's in this neighborhood." Well, they entered New Bond street, and when they came opposite the print seller's where the picture was hanging the leader of the quest said: "Here we are. It's inside."

"What's inside?" asked the other. "The Whistler," said the first. "It's the queerest place for a stable I ever knew," remarked the horsey man. "Where's the whistler here?" "It's upstairs," said his friend, entering.

"How the mischief did they get it upstairs?" inquired the other. "I suppose they carried it up. You didn't fancy it could walk, did you?" "Is it so far gone as that? It must be a roarer," said the horsey man as they went up to the first floor. "I don't know any modern painter named Roarer," said the other. "But there's the Whistler, and you may give me your opinion on it. He calls it 'Sauterne in a Flat.'"

The horsey man turned without a word, strode out of the shop, and the two have never spoken since.

A Clincher. An Irishman visited a tuberculosis exhibit, where lungs in both healthy and diseased conditions were displayed preserved in glass jars. After carefully studying one marked "Cured tuberculosis lung" he turned to the physician and said: "Perhaps it's because Ol'm Irish, but if he cured th' patient how th' devil could ye have his lung in a bottle?"—Lippincott's.

Chinese Writing. The writing of the Chinese and Japanese is wholly different from that of other nations. It is made up of many thousand characters, which stand for whole words and for syllables instead of for letters. It is very hard to learn, and very few, even of the Chinese themselves, know all the characters. The Japanese have made some changes in them.
