How THE WORLD MOVES

Only a few years ago everybody bought coffee green and roasted it at home. Now how many persons will you meet who have never seen coffee in the green state? Coffee roasting and coffee blending has got to be quite an art. We will not tell you our coffees are "the best." Everybody lays claim to that distinction, and everybody cannot be right. All we ask is a trial, and if your purchase proves satisfactory, we feel sure that your relations will be lasting; if not, all the argument in the world would not prevail.

INVASION OF AMERICA

German Idea of How Our Country Could Be Conquered.

NO ATTEMPT ON THE INTERIOR.

Lieutenant von Edelsheim, an Army Officer, Claims That After American Fleet Had Been Destroyed One Army Corps Would Land at an Unexpected Point and Reduce Us to Terms.

A scheme for the invasion of the United States by a German army has been prepared by Lieutenant von Edelsheim of the general staff of the German army. The author presupposes a victory by the imperial army, and, indeed, would dispatch his army of invasion confidently toward America in the wake of the warships, says the New York Journal. He thinks our regular troops available for defense would amount to not more than 20,000 men, and feels little fear of volunteers or militia because the national guard did not, as a whole, offer its services for the war with Spain, and because they are "badly armed and drilled." The strategist outlines his plan in an essay which he has caused to be published in Berlin.

War against the United States of North America would be carried on under conditions necessarily different from those of a campaign against England.

In recent years we have had several occasions of political difficulties with that nation, for the most part arising out of commercial questions. Until the present time these difficulties have been smoothed over by concessions on our part. But since there is a limit to concessions we may ask what powerful means we can make use of, if need arise, to check the action of the United States against our interests; in other words, to impose our will on them by force.

Now, our first element of power is our navy. It has every prospect of combating with success the naval forces of the United States, dispersed as they are over two oceans. But it is evident, in view of the vast extent of territory and the immense resources of the United States, that a naval defeat would not be decisive.

For the very reason of the great extent of the United States an invasion of the interior is not to be considered seriously, but there would be chances of success in striking blows upon the seacoast and cutting the great arteries of exportation and importation so as to paralyze the industrial and commercial life of the United States, which would oblige that power to accept peace.

If the mobilization of the transport squadron and the corps of invasion began at the moment of departure of our fighting fleet for American waters, it will be admitted that the invading troops might come into action on American soil at the end of about four weeks. The United States are not in a condition to bring into opposition within an equal time an army equal in numbers to our corps of invasion.

Actually the regular army of the United States is on a footing of 65,000 men, but of this number there are not more than 30,000 available for the defense of the mother country. Besides that, there must be deducted from that number at least 10,000 men who cannot be spared from surveillance of the Indian territories and from the maritime defenses.

There remain, then, only 20,000 regular troops for the actual campaign. True, there are besides about 100,000 militia, but in the late war the greater part did not answer the call.

Because of the length of the voyage the transportation of the German troops could not be done by surprise, but still the landing could be accomplished suddenly at an unexpected point of the coast. When we consider that the Americans have no plan of mobilization well worked out in time of peace and take into account also the inexperience and weakness of the regular army of the United States, we may confidently hope that a corps of invasion, operating with suddenness, would have chances of success.

We could not dream, of course, of permanent occupation of any great extent of American territory, which would require an army of too high effectiveness; but it would be feasible to occupy the principal maritime cities.

A series of coast landings, using comparatively small forces, could be applied to this purpose. It would be difficult for the Americans to oppose them with success. Although their excellent system of railroads would enable the Americans to concentrate in short time troops at the threatened points on the coast, the invader, by feints of landing now at one point, now at another, could at last attain his end with the co-operation of the naval force.

The corps of invasion could even take the offensive against the enemy's forces while the latter were yet imperfectly concentrated, or he could avoid an attack on their part by re-embarking and moving away to land at still another point.

It is well to remark here that Germany is the only great power in position single handed to attack the United States. England in case of war with that nation could only gain success on the sea. She would be powerless to defend Canada, where the Americans could make good their maritime reverses. Finally no other great power than Germany has of her own sufficient transport vessels to undertake such an operation as here described.

DUBLIN.
Our cisterns are beginning to feel the effects of dry weather. The fatal corn shredder has been at work in our midst, but as yet with no accident. Part of our streets have been thickly graveled of late, but the work for the winter is about over. The measles at present is quite prevalent and is interfering much with the school. Thanksgiving services will be held in the Radical U. B. church, Rev. Lacey of Cambridge City will deliver the sermon. A general turnout ought to be had. Rev. and Mrs. Pierce went to Bloomington the first of the week and will not return until the last. Mother Coleman, south of Dublin, who has been lingering on a bed of affliction for years, died on the 19th of November, aged about 88 years. The remains were taken to Raleigh, Rash county, on Thursday for interment. As yet we can say nothing definite as to the move that has been made about starting up the Champion shops. Miss Anna Russell of Chicago was here a part of last week, the guest of her friend, Mrs. S. F. Cull.
