

EDGAR CAMERON.

One of Ottawa's Young Men, and What He Has Been Doing—Interior of The Studio.

In response to the rap of the Press Tribune interviewer, Mr. Cameron came forward with an urbane smile of welcome, and invited us in. He has his studio cozily and tastily arranged. The floor is covered with matting and rugs and the walls are hung with sketches, studies, finished paintings, and all of those half-finished fancies of the artist that are always so fascinating to look over.

In looking around the room the visitor sees several pieces of finished work that are really very fine. One is the head and shoulders of a little Venetian girl, called "La Strega." It is a very pretty face, and the work is fine and finished. Next to the right we come to a scene from the interior of St. Mark's church, Venice. It is a painting of medium size, nearly square, and is very handsome. It shows one of the apartments of the church, with its dark pillars and its high pews, and some people engaged at worship. Still to the right is a long, large picture in a rough gilt frame. It is a landscape, and is entitled the "Environ of Venues," just below it hangs a small sketch called "Blue and Gray" representing a girl ascending a staircase. Then there are two pictures of the same subject that are the gems of the collection—that is, they seem the cutest and most attractive. One is called "Elviga," and the other "La belle Venetian." They are pictures of a girl in Venice, who, the artist tells us, also went by the name of "Black-eyed Susan." Any way the pictures are both beautiful. There is another head,—of a Neapolitan girl, with black hair—also a pretty picture. These, with a sketch of the "Latin Quarter" of Venice, and one of "The Zatterie," a canal in the same city, complete the finished work that Mr. Cameron now has on exhibition in his studio. There are however, many little beauties on the walls, in the shape of sketches, studies, etc.

Mr. Cameron went to Paris four years ago next September. He spent the first winter in Paris, then went, the first summer of his stay, to Venues, on the Normandy coast. The second summer he went to Barbezon in the forest of Fontainebleau, the home of Millet. The third summer he went to England with a French artist and the last summer he spent in Venice.

Mr. Cameron has certainly made a good start in his profession, and will doubtless rise to some prominence. A visit to his studio will be well repaid by seeing the pieces he now has on exhibition.

The Courts.

Circuit Court—Judge Stipp.

The grand jury finished their work last Saturday, returning the following indictments. Nine indictments against Fred Goerne for forgery. One against S. W. Raymond for embezzlement, against S. W. Raymond and J. F. Nash for conspiracy, against John Hardy for obstructing the highway; against Eliza Hiett, for assault; James McJoney, against William Butters for obtaining money under false pretenses and Gustava Miller for murder.

Now there will be motions to quash, and the sifting process will begin.

It is quite noticeable that the upper floor of the court-house was pretty much all occupied this week. Judge Blanchard was hearing motions in the circuit court room, the principal one being the one for a new trial in the Carr and Kerrigan rape case, which motion was denied. Judge Stipp heard an application for a writ of habeas corpus, holding court in the probate court room, and Judge Dibble heard an alimony case in the county court room. The case before Judge Stipp was one of peculiar interest. A M. Tergenson, of Minneapolis, wanted the custody of his three children, now in the possession of his divorced wife. Judge Stipp thought the children might as well stay where they were. The following is the official record of the week's proceedings:

Margaret Stephan v Fred Goerne et al. Default as to F and K Goerne. Hearing and decree, $2,459.74.

Sarah Nelson v Mary Schaut et al. Bill dismissed by agreement. All damages waived by issuing writ.

A. B. A. of La Salle v Louisa Decosta et al. J. P. Hall appointed guardian for Anna, Ella, May and Phyllis McCostra.

Bulter v D Hess and John H Drutt. Re cog $800.

J. B. W. Co v J. C. & S. Coal Co. Judgment by con. for $21,361.84.

People v Carr and Kerrigan. Motion for new trial overruled. Sentenced on verdict; Carr 3 years and Kerrigan 2 years at hard labor.

People v E Hiett. Deft pleads guilty to assault and battery. Fined ten dollars and costs.

New Cases.—James Van Horn v A D Mead papers not filed. People v Farlan, petition not filed. Irwin v S Hurst, papers not filed. James Baker v S Hurst. Joliet Barb Wire Co v C J & S Coal Co, judgment by confes. Jas Oskill v R B Gattis, foreclosure.

County Court—Judge Snyder.

216. People v Hoadly. State's Attorney nolle prosequi.

Brooks et al v Belknap et al, judgment by confession, $131.81 and costs.

The Utica "Union Pottery," now in course of construction, will be 36x60 feet, three stories high, with a casement at the south end, and a 20x60 engine room at the north end. A 50 horse power engine, with a 60 horse power boiler, will supply the motive power.

Fox river, which at this spring's freshet was higher than known for 30 years before, is probably now lower than it has been at any time in that number of years. No water has been going over the Dayton dam for ten days or more, all the river below contains being the secret leakage through at the foundations of the structure. Above the dam, the water on Wednesday is over a foot below the level of the dam's apron.

The remarkable flow of artesian water on the Deutenman farm, 6 miles this side of Princeton, draws crowds of sight seekers. A party of Peruvians were there Sunday, and found the volume of water and pressure undiminished. The engineer in charge of the boring estimates that the water comes up with force sufficient to carry it seventy feet above the surface, and this from a depth of only fifty-one feet.

The water is very soft and pure, without a trace of mineral salts.

When the river flowed into the Riddle stone quarry at Aurora last spring, a large number of fish were deposited there, and have continued to flourish in the clear cold waters until a few days since, when the water was pumped out by the steam pump.

The fish then became distinctly visible, and after work Wednesday evening the men employed in the quarry had a grand fishing party, although no lines, hooks nor poles were used. They waded into the shallow pool, the bottom of which was thick with mud, and dove the fish until they got stuck in the mud, when they would throw them on shore. About a barrel of fine bass, pickerel, pike, etc., were thus captured.

The Peru Zinc Co. is investigating the recent find of natural gas at Grauville, with a view of using it for fuel in the factory if the supply proves sufficient.

The Millington tile factory will shut down on Saturday evening on account of the dry weather. The demand for tile has been very small, the farmers being very reluctant as to making improvements as long as the crop prospects are uncertain.

The Spring Valley Gazette tells the following facts regarding the Henning gas well, near Grayville: "The iron tubing from the well is about six inches in diameter at the top and three inches at the bottom, 1,016 feet down. The top of the pipe had been plugged up, and an inch pipe inserted in it, with a horizontal piece across the end. From the ends of this pipe the gas was burning freely. At night they said it made a very bright light. The connections were all very loosely made, and no doubt the greater part of the gas escaped without burning. Over nine hundred feet of water stands in the tube, and by listening closely we could hear the gas come up through the water with a noise as if great bubbles were constantly coming to the surface and exploding. Before the gas struck the water stood at a certain level of the top, and afterwards dropped to 120 feet. It is believed a subterranean stream was passed through while going down with the drill, as for a time the dirt made by drilling was carried away as fast as made. At a depth of 300 feet they struck a sixty foot seam of mineral paint, at 400 feet third vein coal, four feet thick; at 470 feet, plumbago, two or three feet thick; at 970 feet, Trenton limestone, which is generally supposed to contain gas. A twelve-horse power engine had worked the drill. The price paid for digging was $2.50 a foot."

On Wednesday evening while trying to step from one car to another of a moving construction train near Dana, Phillip Plunkett fell between them. Only one truck passed over him, but when removed it was found that across his right leg, close to the knee, was a long deep gash, closed by a car wheel, and the ankle of the same leg was also jammed up. He died a few hours afterwards at Streator.

The cathedral glass works which had just been completed at Streator, burned to the ground between the hours of 7 and 10 M on Monday morning.

A company has been organized by practical glass workers to build a new bottle factory at Streator.

If anyone had any doubts as to the success of the monthly horse sale, last Saturday would have removed the doubt. Horses were brought from all parts of the county and buyers were here from all parts of the country. Sixty-nine head of horses were sold and shipped out, and over $10,000 was paid out by the buyers. The prices were good, ranging from $45 for a pony to $225 for a three-year-old Norman colt. From $150 to $180 were the ruling prices for good heavy horses. The buyers, of course, did all they could to get horses cheap, but as each man was his own sales man there was no room for any one to find fault with prices, as it was not a compulsory sale by any means. Saturday's sale demonstrated what we have all long contended, that monthly sales are a good thing for the farmer as well as the horse buyer. If the farmers as a class will only do as a business man would—hold their horses for the sale day—they would make money and have a regular market.—Pontiac Free Trader.

The Joliet council has adopted an ordinance prohibiting all billiard and pool tables, topkis, and cards in connection with saloons, and all games of chance on the streets.

A Trial by Jury.

That great American jury, the people, have rendered a unanimous verdict in favor of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, the standard remedy for bowel and stomach disorders, biliousness, sick headache, dizziness, constipation and sluggish liver.

From Brookfield.

Brookfield, June 27.—The weather is very warm.

Two industrious young farmers of Brookfield, while at work last week, became deeply engaged in a conversation on who the Brookfield correspondent is. The time passed so swiftly by that they did not realize the precious time they were wasting until the sun had set. Never mind, boys, Victoria was close by.

The principal event of the week was a dance at Thos. Talty's last Saturday evening. There was a large crowd present and a good time was reported by all.

G. A. Kennedy visited the county seat, Ah, ha, George, to see the county clerk.

Henry Escherman spent last Sunday in Kinsman. Henry, did you go on another fishing excursion?

Thos. Dunn and his best girl were at the dance last Saturday night.

Frank McCabe visited M. Glendon last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Welsh spent Sunday in Allen.

Mrs. Thomas McCabe visited friends in Ottawa last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Coughlin, Jr., visited friends in Allen last Sunday.

Nellie Bradley went to Ottawa yesterday.

Matt. McGowan, a former resident of Brookfield, but now of Sioux City, Iowa, visited friends in Brookfield quite recently.

S. J. Haight, Sr., and S. J. Haight, Jr., Lorenza Aldrich and others of Meriden's large stock men have been compelled to turn their stock on their meadows and will have no hay to make. Uncle Johnnie Hoffman who shipped hay here all last winter from his immense farm, will not cut any hay; he has had S. J. Haight's drove of 200 steers on his meadows but even the large number of acres could not give grass enough and pasture had to be procured elsewhere. We have been informed that some plowed up their meadows and sowed millet and as there has not been rain enough to start the millet seed it has not bettered their condition for a hay crop.
