

among the dwarf pine and scrub oak thickets, where the Dispatch circulates, there may be some benighted creature who will fancy a relevancy between compulsory church-going and the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic poison. In civilized communities the nonsense will be recognized as "irrelevant and inadmissible."

THE SENATE HYPOCRITES. . . .

The Republic of St. Louis expresses the opinion that the bill which the Senate judiciary committee is now reported to be willing to pass, prohibiting C. O. D. shipments of liquors, addressed to fictitious persons and practically intended for sale to any person paying the charges, is hypocritical. It points out that such shipments have already practically ceased, and says:

It is merely an empty and hypocritical bid for favor with those who desire to restrict or do away with the liquor traffic.

There is no more honesty in it than there is in Republican promises to do something to the tariff "after the election."

PROHIBITIONISTS AND TAXPAYING. . . .

The Champion of Fairplay, a Chicago liquor paper, insults the national flag by placing it at the head of a column of mendacious nonsense in which it claims for the liquor traffic the credit of "saving Old Glory." The matter with which it supports this claim is a mass of boasting concerning the dirty hush-money which the liquor traffic wrests from its victims and turns into the United States treasury. The outburst closes with this sentence:

A professional Prohibitionist never has and never will contribute one cent towards the support of the government.

Whatever "professional Prohibitionist" may mean, this is sure, the mass of Prohibitionists are honest, well-to-do citizens, paying their taxes without the constant supervision of a governmental department and a host of detectives and criminal lawyers to make them do it—helping, too, to pay the expenses that the Champion's crowd creates.

POOR OLD TIMES . . .

The New York Times which, in all its history was probably never known to utter a single word favorable to the temperance reform, must have read some handwriting on the wall somewhere for, reviewing an article in which the advance of Prohibition is summarized, it says:

Nevertheless, sooner or later, the pendulum must swing the other way. The best than can be hoped for is that the saloon will never regain all of its lost power in the states which have abolished it.

Doing very well, poor old Times. But don't worry about that "pendulum."

Local Option

[Orrin H. Graham in the Venango Daily Herald.]

Local option is (with all deference to the many genuine adherents of the temperance cause who favor it) the oddest superstition since the days of Salem witchcraft. When we see that it has had the field for more than half a century, that millions of dollars have been expended on it, that it has had the advantage of large newspaper publicity and the best of opportunity in every way to show what it can do, and when we see that in spite of all this the liquor traffic, with every other evil, is steadily and marvelously on the increase in the land, that so many otherwise shrewd persons are clinging hopefully to it will one day be regarded as incredible.

Just as I opposed high license when it was all the rage, and Republican booze papers were advocating it as the final solution of the liquor problem, so, without any tremors that you can notice, I record myself against local option now. And just as I was right then, I will be seen to be right this time.

They'll Stand Pat

[From the Buffalo Courier.]

There is no reason to believe that the Republican national convention or the Democratic national convention this year will endorse national Prohibition. The failure to do so may lead an unusual number of Democrats in the South and an unusual number of Republicans in the North to vote for the Prohibition Presidential ticket. But if this should occur, the Republican party would have far more to fear in the effect it would have on the electoral vote than would the Democratic party.

These are a few Prescriptions taken from the many that crowd the pages of Professor G. D. Revell's magnificent two volume work "HEALTH."

Are you tired of quack medical books that physicians will not endorse, that do not meet the practical need, that are far more likely to do harm than good? Do you want accurate, definite, complete information on health subjects, simply told in clear, understandable language, illustrated where necessary, and only where necessary, a book without padding, full of meat, designed not to acquire dust or to weight the library table, but for use whenever there is need.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, Sec. Indiana State Board of Health, Indianapolis, Ind., says:--"I think that HEALTH is a very valuable book, not only for the home, for which it is principally intended, but for students of hygiene as well. It is plain and simple, and hence easily understood, and there are chapters in the work, any one of which is worth more than the price of it. I cordially recommend it."

M. Helena McMillan, Principal, Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, says:--"HEALTH I consider a very valuable book for the household. It takes up a wide range of subjects and handles them in a way easy of understanding."

Two handsome volumes of over 1400 pages printed on extra quality of paper. Over 300 illustrations which have been selected from the best anatomical, surgical, medical and other sources. Bound in half Persian Morocco, with marbled edges. Back stamped in gold. Complete index. The most complete, up-to-date and desirable medical work for the home ever published.

HEALTH is a work sold on its merits, and is not tied up with a magazine subscription or premium offer of any kind. Note that we make no high sounding claims about a "limited edition," or "time limit to our offer." We believe the work should be in the home of every family in the United States, and we shall endeavor to place as many copies of it as we can. Note this point also, for sincerity's sake. It is not claimed for Health that it makes unnecessary the services of a physician in serious cases. It is exactly what we claim it to be, a high class work, scientific, yet clear, that meets the actual practical need. It tells you exactly what to do to prevent sickness and to cure sickness, so clearly, that a child can understand. It contains information that it is your positive duty to know. You will find in this advertisement no overstatement of any kind. Get the books under our plan, and examine them for yourself.
