

Poultry Notes

The bulletin received from New York for the month of May reads as follows:

"Hatches are beginning to come better. The season, however, is backward, and the indications are, that it will pay to run late.

"As a rule, eggs have run poor this Spring, except where the stock was especially mated early.

"There has been a much larger percentage of weak germs that partially develop, or even get to the point where the chicks have strength enough to work their way through the shells.

"The severe weather of February and March and the late Spring have caused the trouble, but this effect is rapidly wearing off, and reports from points south are showing hatching work equal to last year's work.

"These reports are gathered from all over the United States and printed each month, so do not be discouraged if your early eggs are not hatching well; but keep on until you have hatched as many as you need to keep up your flock.

"A hen is a good layer or a poor one not because her mother, or any of her ancestors, were high or low producers, but because her father came from a superior or a poor laying hen.

"The day a chick leaves the shell it is endowed with all the yolks, or ova in eggs, that it can ever lay—and several thousand more.

"No amount of feeding, care, or housing will ever add one yolk or egg to the number already provided by nature; but the method of feeding, caring, or housing a hen determines largely the number of tiny yolks which the hen will be able to ripen or develop into full sized yolks and manufacture into the finished product.

"So do not get the idea that you feed a hen to feed yolks and eggs into her body: you feed for the purpose of enabling her to develop the yolks which nature has already provided.

"Man has taken the jungle fowl, which laid only a few eggs per year, but was of longer life than our domestic fowl of today, and he has bred and improved it until we now have hens laying 300 eggs in a year, and 1000 eggs in a lifetime of a few years.

"Some poultry men even electric-light their laying houses, so as to keep their hens laying more hours of the day.

"The eggs nature intended a hen to lay in 15 to 20 years are now forced from her, through feeding and breeding, in a very few years."
