A HEATHEN FETE.

Some Interesting Glimpses of the Great Japanese Capital.

One of the Periodical Outbursts of Heathenism—A Hundred Thousand Lanterns Swaying in the Breeze—A Storm.

[Tokio (Japan) Letter.]

There are periodical outbursts of heathenism among the Japanese, despite their aping western nations. One is impressed with this more than ever at the time of some great festival. With modern Japanese generally a religious observance becomes a pretext for a holiday. Indeed, so numerous have their frolics become that many Japanese have no idea what certain of them are for. A few days ago, on the occasion of one of these holidays, I asked a very intelligent Japanese what it commemorated, and he replied: "I do not know, but I think it refers to something connected with the founding of the government." To the masses these days usually mean a good time; to the carpenters, paperhangers and shop-keepers a brisk trade; to the proprietors of tea-houses and brothels a perfect rush of custom, and to the priests the skillful garnering of many thousands of homely coppers that drop creakingly into their coffers of an almost bankrupt and perfunctory priesthood.

One of these festivals, called in the native tongue matsuri, is held at Kanda, in the city of Tokio. The great show was to begin on Sunday, and continue three days, but by Saturday night the population had increased by 25,000. The people, men, women and children, came by rail, by carriages, by jinrickshaw, and on foot to the scene of festivities. Every available spot was crowded, and the immense throng swayed to and fro, jostling each other in their effort to reach the center of attraction. One must come to these Oriental lands to find a crowd. Numbers never seem to interfere with pleasure. The ten thousands may swell to the twenties, and from this to the fifties, without inconvenience. This is due to the peculiar arrangement of the cities, where there are no sidewalks, and all the street is thus used for pleasure purposes. It is also due to the peculiar construction of the houses, the whole front and partitions being movable. It is owing also to the simple food and culinary arrangement which make the feeding of 20,000 people an easy task.

From Asakusa to Kanda and thence to the castle, a distance of ten miles, stretched temporary balconies just under the eaves of the heavy-roofed houses, that all within might see the countless host without. A hundred thousand lanterns swayed in the breeze from the eaves of houses, swung across streets supported by the slim bamboo, over arched entrances with dancing waves of light, glimmered in the tree-tops, and glinted from some pleasure garden where the sound of voice and flute with the monotonous hum-hum of the samisen, the Japanese guitar, floated out on the evening air. It was a gorgeous scene, but the lanterns cast such a weird, fantastic light over all that but for the surging crowd we might fancy the ghosts of the departed Orientals were abroad in very fact. It was a beautiful scene. The plash of some miniature cataract as it tumbled over the rocks beneath fantastic pines mingled with the minor triad of the old temple drum, and gave us renewed visions of Arabian Nights.

On Sunday the time was spent in paying penance and purchasing paper prayers at the temple, where the priests were doing a thrifty business. The practice is for the priests to sell a strip of paper with some characters written on it, and these are hung up before the god, while the supplicant slakes his quaffing sake (i. e. Japanese wine or beer) at some stand a little further on. Arrangements had been made to far eclipse any previous effort this year, though nobody seems to know why. Forty gorgeous cars had been made to enter the grand procession. These had platforms about ten feet high upon which was fastened one of the patron gods. There was Dai Koku, the god of wealth. He is very portly and stands on two bags of rice, the symbol of wealth in this country. There is Hotei, the god of happiness. He is even fatter and jollier than Dai Koku. He drinks too much, but he is the friend of the children, making them toy kites and all sorts of toys. There is the god of fire, which resembles the Harpies of Virgil, and there are many others, besides deified ancestors and others of less renown. There are seven patron gods in all, six of them being men. Benten, the patron of the family and the sea, is a woman.

Mixed up with these notions of Deity are snakes, dragons with a thousand heads, an infinity of claws and tail, animals the like of which are not in heaven above or earth beneath. The cars are decked out with gold and silver paper and bright ornaments of tin foil and gilt. Everything in human form is out of proportion, the eyes being sometimes as large as saucers, while the form is not more than six feet high. The people yearn not for the rubs of art but for effect, and they get it. Bright and early these forty cars, drawn by their sleek oxen, were ready to start amid a bedlam of noise of drums, horns, flutes, tom-toms, triangles, cymbals, and everything else under the sun that could give one the notion of a pandemonium. Everything as to marching was in beautiful disorder. There was no commander, and none but a demon with a legion of lungs could have commanded. The plan here is for a procession to start and the vast throng moves along with it like the steady flow of a glacier.

These proud picnickers were destined to disappointment, for, lo! a storm arose, the breeze freshened to a gale, and the gale strengthened to a tempest, and the tempest ended in a typhoon. Those resplendent cars were in an hour's time only bedraggled ruins, and in thirty minutes more they were caparisoned in the panic stricken crowd. To add to the dire calamity, the temporary balconies erected for the occasion were wrenched from their places, while everything movable—doors, fences, roof-tiles—went flying through the air. Booths and stalls erected for the display of wares were tumbled to the middle of the street, while a flood of rain poured over everything. After the storm had passed over the city it was found that upwards of 2,000 houses had been completely, and many more partially, wrecked. The expenses for this festival amounted to over $20,000, which had been mostly pledged by shopkeepers and hucksters, and the affair not meeting expenses much distress ensues. Then, too, the lower classes always indulge in finer clothes at such times, and it is reported in the native papers that some of the poor wretches pledged their wives and children in payment of the debts thus incurred, another evidence of heathenism.

Rheumatism, neuralgia and nervous headache are not easily cured, although they are common diseases. At last a remedy has been found in Tongaline, which is highly recommended by physicians. J. H. Garver, M. D., Pueblo, Col., writes: "Am pleased with Tongaline. Have frequently prescribed it with entire satisfaction."

A new machine makes 2,000 pins a minute, but a well regulated family with three or four children and a hired girl in it can keep one machine going the year round.

So many sufferers from those distressing diseases, rheumatism and neuralgia, have found a panacea for their ills in Athlophoros that it is not wonderful persons having read of almost incredible cures should entertain "great expectations" when they seek relief for themselves in its all powerful attributes. M. N. R. Ansbach, of Clarinda, Ia., writes: "Please find enclosed postal note for one dollar, for one bottle of Athlophoros, as I cannot do without it in the house, the first bottle doing all I could expect."

A MITE SONG.

[Christian Giver.]

Only a drop in the bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty,
Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny,
It was all I had to give;
But as pennies make the dollars,
It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon
And some toys—they were not new—
But they made the sick child happy,
Which has made me happy, too.

Only some outgrown garments—
They were all I had to spare—
But they 'd help to clothe the needy,
And the poor are everywhere.

A word now and then of comfort,
That cost me nothing to say;
But the poor old man died happy,
And it helped him on the way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gift be poor and small;
What doth he think of his children
When they never give at all?

John Kelly.

[Joe Howard in Boston Herald.]

Many of my readers have seen and heard of John Kelly, in his charitable lectures, but thousands know nothing of him beyond the general idea that he is a rough, brutal, forced Irishman, who dominates the chief faction of the Democratic party in this city. Now, as a matter of fact, John Kelly isn't an Irishman. He is neither brutal nor coarse, but on the contrary, is about as mild mannered and well behaved an American-born citizen as walks the streets of his native town, New York. I have known John Kelly a great many years, and have frequently been brought in violent contact with him, but I have never known him to do a rude, an unmanly, an uncourteous act, and he is one of the few men in this country who have achieved what the psalmist regards as a peculiar thing in life, having conquered his own tongue, which, according to the inspired writer, is better than having captured a city.

Mr. Kelly was on the other side of the street, bowling along at the rate of seven miles an hour, when I pointed him out to the boys. Every one said in different language, "Do you know him, and why can't we speak to him." I instantly crossed Broadway, and was greeted with characteristic cordiality, as were my young friends, each of whom I introduced by name to the grand sachem of Tammany hall. As we conversed, the others looked on with unfeigned interest. Mr. Kelly is nearly six feet tall, and very heavy built. He probably weighs, considerably over 200 pounds, and possibly 250. He has a square built head, covered with thick, short cut hair. He wears his beard, which is inclined to carrotness, very close clipped.

His pictures in Harper's Weekly and Puck look no more like him than they look like the Angel Gabriel or Petrarch, the historian. He has a Milesian type of countenance, and looks like a Norwegian or a Scandinavian. His face is square, his eyes blue, his nose straight, his mouth well formed, his jaws heavy, and his chin pronouncedly heavy. His voice is low and melodious, his language is always well chosen. He produces the impression—well, if you don't know him you would think he was simply a straightforward, intelligent, honest-meaning farmer, contractor or man of affairs, but not in any sense a metropolitan manipulator.

A Good Sermon—But the Text!

[Exchange.]

Not long ago we heard a clergyman relate this story. The deceased had been a young man and a wild one at that. He died as the result of a spree. Still he had many redeeming qualities. He was a noble-souled, big-hearted fellow, who would do anything for a friend, and who was generally popular despite his failings. The church was crowded to hear what the clergyman would have to say. His numerous friends even threatened an unpleasant demonstration if a lack of liberality let the minister into very pronouncedly "improving the occasion." There was an expectant hush as the minister announced his text: "Died Abner as the fool dieth."

The sermon was a tribute, eloquent and evidently sincere, to the character of the deceased. His generous nature was expatiated upon at length—and then the clergyman simply repeated his text: "Died Abner as the fool dieth." His goodness as a brother, son and friend were done full justice to—and in conclusion of this the clergyman again said over the text: "Died Abner as the fool dieth." His public spirit, the gap his removal made in the community were not omitted—only to close with the inevitable words of the text: "Died Abner as the fool dieth." The mourners filed out. One of the boys nudged another and inquired what he thought of the sermon. "The sermon," the other answered; "the sermon was first-rate, but what a text!"

A Philosopher.

[Arkansaw Traveler.]

A Little Rock man sold his cooking stove to get money enough to take his family to the circus. When one of his friends remonstrated with him he said:

"We had no use for the stove. Had nothing to cook."

"But why didn't you buy something to eat with the money you got for the stove?"

"Then we would have had nothing to cook it on. Don't talk to me. I'm a philosopher."

Tongaline

TRADE MARK

NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM AND NERVOUS HEADACHE

TONGA is a product of the Tonga or Friendly Islands, where it has long been used as a valuable remedy by the natives.

Tongaline is a compound of Tonga with other ingredients whose curative properties have been thoroughly tested.

Tongaline is taken internally, and produces no unpleasant effects.

It contains no Opium or Morphine

Am convinced, after testing it, that TONGALINE possesses decided and marked curative properties in Rheumatic Neuralgia, and also in Muscular Rheumatism.—WALTER COLES, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

Have tested TONGALINE in several cases of Neuralgia. It has given me perfect satisfaction.
C. B. CHITTENDEN, M. D., Feeberg, Ill.

Have used TONGALINE in Neuralgia and Inflammatory Rheumatism, with the very best results.

A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC R'Y,

Being the Great Central Line, affords to travelers, by reason of its unrivaled geographical position, the shortest and best route between the East, Northeast and Southeast, and the West, Northwest and Southwest.

It is literally and strictly true, that its connections are all of the principal lines of road between the Atlantic and the Pacific.

By its main line and branches it reaches Chicago, Joliet, Peoria, Ottawa, La Salle, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Keokuk, Knoxville, Oskaloosa, Fairfield, Des Moines, West Liberty, Iowa City, Atlantic, Avoca, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Center and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Caliatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri, and Leavenworth and Atchison in Kansas, and the hundreds of cities, villages and towns intermediate. The

"GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE,"

As it is familiarly called, offers to travelers all the advantages and comforts incident to a smooth track, safe bridges, Union Depots at all connecting points, Fast Express Trains, composed of COMMODIOUS, WELL VENTILATED, WELL HEATED, FINELY UPHOLSTERED and ELEGANT DAY COACHES; a line of the MOST MAGNIFICENT HORTON RECLINING CHAIR CARS ever built; PULLMAN'S latest designed and handsomest PALACE SLEEPING CARS, and DINING CARS that are acknowledged by press and people to be the FINEST RUN UPON ANY ROAD IN THE COUNTRY, and in which superior meals are served to travelers at the low rate of SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS EACH.

THREE TRAINS each way between CHICAGO and the MISSOURI RIVER.

TWO TRAINS each way between CHICAGO and MINNEAPOLIS and ST. PAUL, via the famous

ALBERT LEA ROUTE.

A New and Direct Line, via Geneseo and Kankakee, has recently been opened, between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and La Fayette, and Council Bluffs, St. Paul, Minneapolis and intermediate points.

All Through Passengers carried on Fast Express Trains.
