

don't want to lose the man I love. Will I lose his respect if I allow him to call? Stenographer.

I wish instead of reducing my advice to cold print, my dear, I could sit beside you and we could talk it out.

Society says we must not admit a man who is not a member of our family to our bedroom.

One of the hardest things for the girl who works and who has no home is to regulate her social life so that it will conform to social conventions (which always presuppose that a woman has a home) and have any companionship of the opposite sex.

Personally, my dear, after a number of years in the great army of women who work I want to say that I do not believe in that old tradition that most men are carnal-minded beasts going about seeking whom they may devour.

The young men who visit girls who work for the greater part are as honest in their intentions as the girls who receive them. I am glad to say right here that 99 per cent of American young men's love means marriage.

You can make your room look very cozy with a divan covered with a pretty couch cover. As you sign yourself stenographer, you probably can find enough money to buy some art denim or even a cheap tapestry cover for this couch and you can use it at night to sleep on.

I certainly should invite young men to my room. You will be no more alone there than your rhoter probably was in the little country parlor from which the whole family took care to absent themselves when "sis' beau" came to "sit up" with sis.

If you should lose your lover's respect by so doing he is a man that you would not care to marry and it will be up to you to immediately forget him and right here let me tell you the best way to do this is to get another young man.

TODAY'S HEALTHGRAM

Bronchitis is one of several winter diseases to which children are subject. It is frequently caused by infection from other colds.

Sometimes there is a slight fever. Complete rest and fresh air are necessary. Attacks of bronchitis usually last from five days to a week. Care should be taken that the child does not catch fresh cold, or pneumonia may result.
