Felix Diaz.

Havana, Nov. 7.—Though rumors are afloat to the effect that the knife used by the assassin who cut Gen. Felix Diaz, Mexican refugee, twice in the neck, was poisoned, there is nothing in Diaz' condition to indicate this, and it is believed the cuts will soon heal.

The attempt to assassinate Diaz was very spectacular. He was sitting, with Luis Malba, manager of the Mexico City street railways, and Cecello Ocon, who fled with him from Vera Cruz, on a bench in the Malacón, listening to a band concert, when five Mexicans attacked him without warning.

The man with the knife shot at Diaz, but his bullet wounded a companion. Though Diaz was armed, he did not attempt to use his gun, but defended himself with his umbrella.

Diaz and his companions, the wounded Mexican and Harry Berliner, a New York salesman who came to Diaz' rescue, were arrested.

ATTEMPT ON HUERTA'S LIFE

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 7.—A special to the Chronicle states that an attempt was made yesterday to assassinate Provisional President Huerta of Mexico. The report states that while Huerta was out driving a man ran in front of the carriage, seized the horse's heads, and flourished an automatic revolver. The horses, frightened, reared and struck the man with their hoofs, fatally injuring him.

LIND AFTER HUERTA

Washington, Nov. 7.—President Huerta is to be subjected to renewed pressure to force him to relinquish control of national affairs in Mexico. It is declared that John Lind, who left Vera Cruz last night to be gone several days, is acting under instructions from President Wilson, who ordered him to tell influential Mexican bankers just why this government opposed Huertalism. It is also understood Lind will endeavor to undermine Huerta with certain of his principal supporters.

Jones—Can you afford my daughter the luxuries to which she has been accustomed? Sultor—Not much longer. That's why I want to get married!
