

$155 and a trunk full of good clothes. He registered at the Chicago Beach Hotel. High living soon ate up the $155 and he was forced to leave his trunk at the hotel as security for his bill. Then he went to a "flop" house. One morning he woke up to find that some one had taken his best and only suit and left some rags in its place.

Worthington then decided it was time to hunt a job. He knew of the newspaper strike and became a newsboy for the Examiner. His first thought after securing the job was to buy a gun. For some reason the Examiner did not provide him with a special policeman's badge, souvenirs given away free by the chief of police and sheriff.

Worthington evidently is not a good killer. The Examiner made no effort to bail him out, as it does in the case of Arthur Friedman and the Barrett brothers, whose names are familiar on police arrest books but not on court dockets.

NOW'S YOUR CHANCE TO GET A GOOD PEEP

Here's The Day Book's Moon Calendar, and it shows that we only have a few days left in which to get accurate dope on the big question: "How Big Does the Moon Look to You?"

On the twenty-seventh of the month of August the moon will be in its full glory. Get the first peep on that day when she's just coming over the horizon, and later when she's well up in the sky.

Now, everybody get busy, and write to the Moon Editor of The Day Book on how big the moon looks to you, and watch for the opinions of your friends.

She Didn't Know Mother.

Boys will be boys, except when they are little wretches, and Tommy was no exception.

He had broken one of the school rules, and the teacher told him to tell his mother about it, and also about the punishment he had received. This was foxy of teacher. She thought mother might thrash him again.

The next morning she asked:

"Well, Tommy, did you tell your mother about your bad behavior yesterday, and how I punished you?"

"Yes, miss," replied Tommy, quickly.

"Well, what did your mother say?" was teacher's next question.

"Said she'd like to wring your neck, miss," replied Tommy calmly.
