

'I suggested going into the rescue home for a while, but she would not agree to that.

"There was no other place to send the girl, and I was forced to let her go back where she came from, as many have done before and as many will do unless we provide some means of helping them.

"I had four similar cases in the past two months.

"To save the girls, who need saving most, we must have a home where girls can be cared for until they are strong enough to face the world.

"When they are ready to leave this refuge we must give them work that pays a living wage, not a mere pittance to keep body and soul together.

"We must give them decent living quarters, and we must give them a place in the social scheme, such as we have always allotted to the male transgressor."

OUTBURSTS OF EVERETT TRUE

