A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and take up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1892.

These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. They positively contain neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

DEADLOCKED AGAIN

Republicans Tie Up the House for a Session.

RULE UP TO MAKE MEMBERS VOTE.

Ten Dollars Fine for Each Refusal the Salient Provision Therein—Gotten Before the House After a Sharp Fight and That Achievement Followed by Another That Lasts All Day—All the Big Guns Engaged in the Battle.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Democratic managers of the house decided that the time had come when some method should be adopted to force the Republicans to participate in the legislation. Throughout the last congress and during the recent congress the Republicans have on frequent occasions deadlocked the house for days by refusing the answer to their names, thus breaking a quorum. As there was no rule to compel them to vote, and as the speaker declined to adopt Reed's expedient of counting a quorum without the authorization of a rule—which rule he would if necessity oppose in the committee of rules, of which he is a member, and in the house for one sufficient reason of no other, that he had been one of the fiercest denouncers of Reed when he applied it—the house was constantly at the mercy of the minority with Reed continually remarking in effect: "Didn't I tell you so?"

Had to Adopt Some Method.

Many plans have been offered by different Democrats, and there was no inconsiderable number of them who favored a rule which would empower the speaker or clerk to record as "present but not voting" the Republicans who declined to respond to their names. Reed himself has been constantly fighting to force the speaker to adopt the quorum-counting device of which he was the author, and has frequently twitted Crisp with the question: "Why don't you count us?" For the last few days, however, the Republicans have blocked business and there was a widespread belief on the Democratic side that this was in pursuance of a preconcerted arrangement with the Republicans at the senate end of the Capitol to delay all business with a view of postponing action on the tariff bill. It was intimated that a quorum would hereafter be demanded not only on partisan measures, but on the routine business of the house.

Concluded to Fine Non-Voters.

Under such a stress of circumstances Speaker Crisp, Catchings, and Outhwaite, comprising the Democratic end of the committee on rules, decided that the time had come to act. A resolution embodying a new rule designed to fine members $10 for refusing to vote was prepared and presented when the house met. The Democrats were by no means unanimous in their approval of it. While the general sentiment of the house favored some modification of the rule to accomplish the purpose desired a wide difference of opinion existed as what that modification should be. Some of them, like Cockran, preferred an out-and-out quorum-counting rule on the line of the amendment to the rules offered by Springer; others preferred other schemes.

And So the Fight Began.

And so the fight was begun and the first day's battle ended in victory for the Republicans in spite of the tactics of the speaker, who swept aside all preliminaries regardless of rules until he got the matter before the house. When the reading of the rule began Reed vainly attempted to interrupt by appeals for recognition on a point of order, but the speaker, with averted head, refused to listen to him, and Reed finding his efforts futile sank down in his chair. Reed was again on his feet when the reading was completed, but the speaker recognized Catchings to demand the previous question. Then he turned to Reed, who said he desired to raise a point of no quorum. When Crisp heard this he refused to heed it.

Quite a Tied Up House.

The motions, counter-motions, points of order and such that followed for an hour or two put the house in a "pretty mess." Parliamentarily speaking it was tied in a double-bow knot. During proceedings to determine who the absentees were under the call of the house, a motion was entertained, and a roll call was had on a motion to excuse Hull. The roll call resulted against excusing Hull. Catchings was recognized to offer a resolution, but before it was read Lacey claimed the floor to move a reconsideration of the vote just taken.

WANTS A LITTLE SALVAGE.

Reed Gets Off a Characteristic Remark—Hutchinson's Reply.

Then Reed contended that the motion to reconsider under the rules took precedence of all motions. "I trust," said he sarcastically, "that out of the wreck of parliamentary worlds some few precedents will be saved." Richardson, who was in the chair at time, directed the clerk to read the resolution, which proved to be a resolution revoking all leaves of absence except on account of sickness and directing the sergeant-at-arms to request the attendance of some absentees by telegraph. Both Reed and Boutelle jumped to their feet when the reading of the resolution was completed and made the point of order that it did not take precedence of a motion to reconsider. Catchings argued that the adoption of his resolution would terminate further proceedings under the call, and must therefore take precedence of a motion to reconsider a vote which was a part of such proceedings.

Reed taunted the Democratic side, with its 100 majority, with being powerless to transact business without smashing every rule of parliamentary law. When he sat down Hutchinson of Texas, evidently smarting under the sting of the ex-speaker's words, declared he was tired of being lectured and lacerated by Reed. As a Democrat when Reed counted a quorum he had agreed with him. A wave of Republican applause greeted this statement. Hutchinson wheeled around and facing his political adversaries shouted: "Oh, don't applaud, I shall strike you in the short ribs in a moment."

He went on to explain that he believed in counting a quorum because it appeared to be straightforward business proposition. He endorsed it as a business man, but the rule had been so tyrannically executed, so much vicious legislation had been passed under it, that a liberty loving people had condemned it. Reed had abused a good rule. Reed had crucified it and he objected to the crucifier of the rule claiming to be its father. The debate over the point of order continued for over an hour, the giants on both sides crossing swords. Ex-Speaker Grow, Boutelle, Hooker, Reed, Catchings and others were at various times engaged in the fray.

At the conclusion of the debate Richardson, who was still in the chair, held that while it was competent to enter a motion to reconsider, a previous motion having been made in the form of Catchings' resolution the latter took precedence, but would not prevent the disposal of the motion to reconsider at a subsequent period. He therefore sustained the point of order. This had the effect of making Catchings' resolution the pending question. Lacey appealed from the decision of the chair. Catchings moved to lay the appeal on the table, pending which Pickler moved to adjourn.

The motion to adjourn was lost—157 to 27—and the motion to lay the appeal from the decision of the chair on the table was carried—144 to 24. Pickler then renewed his motion to adjourn. The motion to adjourn was again lost—91 to 146. Reed then attempted to enter a motion to dispense with further proceedings under the call, but the speaker ruled it out of order and the vote was about to recur on the demand for the previous question when Reed again moved to adjourn.

Again the motion to adjourn was lost, and the vote was then taken on the demand for the previous question on the resolution to revoke leaves of absence and telegraph for absentees, and it was ordered—132 to 3. Reed made the point of no quorum. The chair overruled the point of order. Boutelle moved to adjourn. It was lost. The resolution was then adopted without a division, and at 6:30 the house adjourned.

BUTTERWORTH CLOSES HIS TALK.

Summary by the Ohio Lawyer of the Colonel's Case.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Major Butterworth closed his effort in behalf of Colonel Breckinridge with a peroration in which he summarized the case and the positions of plaintiff and defendant. He said that the question was not whether William C. P. Breckinridge had violated any ordinance, human or divine; had been guilty of moral turpitude—conduct which would bring upon him condemnation; but whether those two parties had agreed that he was to become her husband and she his wife. To awaken horror before the public there had been a tale that Colonel Breckinridge had led astray a guileless little girl and had led her down the path of nine years of immorality to a marriage contract ruthlessly violated. The jury was to determine whether there had been any such guileless little girl. He denied that the woman came to court to redress a great wrong. No wrong could be redressed in that way.

"For what motive does the desperate woman walk on any stage? She deliberately turned from everything that man or woman could desire and proclaimed her shame. This is the vestibule of a wider stage upon which she desires to enter." It would be said: "Butterworth, you are defending sin," but no; he had a little family of his own, one son who had to fight the battle of life against fearful odds. No, he was defending the standard of womanhood, the virtue of city and of country girls.

He protested against such a standard being raised for virtue. As for his client no one knew through what mire that man had been dragged, and such was the penalty of sin. He did not want the jury carried away by the whisper floating in the air that a verdict for the defendant would be a ratification of his sin. He asked them also not to commend a woman who had borne herself as this plaintiff had; not to elevate her for the degradation of him. Such a verdict would mean to the girls that virtue was but as a cloak to be thrown off or put on. American womanhood should be vindicated by the standard to which wives and mothers must be held.

A Statesman Woman.

We read that when Jove had the ordering of mundane affairs, he promised to send rain on any day that would be agreed upon by the whole world. It was reported at last that they were all ready for rain at a certain date, except one old woman, who wanted to make soup on that particular day. Women are often accused of being capricious and whimsical; but there is one point on which they will all agree—the desirability of being well, and looking well. Every woman, be she young or old, always wants to look her best; and in order to do this, it is necessary to attain that state of health which will impart a sparkle to the eye, a bloom to her cheek, and grace and symmetry to her entire form. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a panacea for all chronic "female weaknesses" and derangements of function peculiar to the sex, and is beyond all comparison the great healer of women.
