The October number of the North American Review is a notable issue, containing many articles on timely and interesting topics by distinguished writers.

The frontispiece of the October Review of Reviews is a reproduction of a photograph of William Cullen Bryant, taken shortly before his death.

To hear him shout from the platforms through the state about his love for the down-trodden workmen and about his efforts to elevate their condition and raise their standard of wages it would hardly seem possible that only a few short years ago he gloried in the performance of an act of the grossest injustice of labor.

The following items relate wholly to the revival of business in the textile industry, as reported mainly by the Textile World, a trade publication.

The Baltic Mills company, Enfield, N. H., has enlarged its plant.

The East Pond Manufacturing company, Newport, Me., is to add 10 more looms to the woolen mills, which will give an output of one-third more capacity than now.

The Nemadji Woolen mills, a new corporation at Superior, Wis., is capitalized at $20,000.

The machinery of the Riverside Woolen company at Lebanon, N. H., is being increased.

At a recent meeting of the stockholders of the Modena Cotton mills, Gastonia, N. C., it was decided to put on 70 more looms and 3,000 spindles.

The Nonotuck Silk company intends building an addition to its mill at Hartford, Mass.

The woolen mill at East Lyon, R. I., which has been idle for several years, has been leased to Alfred Burdick and George Lawton, who will manufacture yarns.

The Pineville Cotton mills, Pineville, N. C., have been sold to Stephen A. Jenks, of Pawtucket, R. I.

The Globe mill, Clarke & Co., proprietors, Augusta, Ga., manufacturers of yarns, have late put in 40 looms, and will manufacture drills, sheeting, etc.

A new mill, the Tuckapahaw, is being built near Wellford, S. C. It will be five stories high, 300 feet long and 100 feet wide, with a capacity of 30,000 spindles.

Nearly all the stock ($100,000) in the new Melrose Cotton mill, at Raleigh, N. C., has been taken, and the work on the factory will probably commence this fall.

The new addition now being built to the Odell Manufacturing company's mill, Concord, N. C., is to be a cloth and slasher building, two stories high, 65x30 feet.

These few paragraphs are only the most important in a list several times as long, but they are sufficient to indicate the general effect of the adoption of the new democratic tariff law.
