Patent Cow For Hunters.
 A Nebraska man has invented a patent cow for hunters. The invention presents the perfect outward semblance of a most pensable and amiable cow, but the fore legs and hind legs are in fact the two pairs of legs of two men. They are armed with guns and have a plentiful supply of ammunition. The patent cow moves along like an ordinary harmless animal until it is in the midst of a lot of birds, when it comes open and the two men inside blaze away. Formed in the sides of the frame, at suitable points, are windows or openings protected by outward swinging flap blinds, and through these windows the sportsman in the rear may discharge his fowling piece when the game has been successfully stalked. For the firing of the hunter in the front of the decoy there is provided a downward swinging portion, which includes the head and neck of the animal, so that by simply releasing a small catch from the inside of the framework this releases the swinging front portion, which immediately drops by gravity and thus leaves the sportsman free.—Boston Transcript.

At Sea in a Coffin.
 It was the French assassin Lupi who escaped to sea from Cayenne in a coffin. He managed to get some nails, tar and cotton, and one dark night he got into the coffin shed. He selected a fine, staunch and seaworthy coffin, fastened the lid in order to turn it into a deck, leaving a cockpit sufficient to enable him to crawl in. He calked all the joints as well as he could, and when this work was finished he made a pair of paddles out of two planks. Then he brought out his craft with great precaution. Without much difficulty he reached the water's edge. Silently and slowly he proceeded in the hope of reaching either Venezuela or British Guiana, 150 nautical miles distant. Fortunately or unfortunately for Lupi the steamer Abeille, returning from the Antilles, off Paramaribo, picked him up, half drowned and almost in a fainting condition, and a few hours later he was in irons in his cell.—San Francisco Argonaut.
