

THE LIVE SPORTING NOTES FROM EVERYWHERE

There is a general opinion that the last ramifications of the big deal that sent Joe Tinker to the Reds and Frank Chance to the Yanks have not been heard from.

Herrman turned over five players for Tinker, Loudermilk and Chapman. The last two were never considered very great assets. Without belittling Tinker, who is a crack shortfielder, and should make good as a manager, Murphy seems to have the best of the deal. Mike Mitchell is a good outfielder, Knisely is another of the same brand, and Phelan and Corriden are rattling infielders. Humphries is an ordinary pitcher.

Herrman seems to be entitled to something more. The American league has shown it was ready to go to any lengths to land Chance in New York, and one of the clubs in that organization may be forced to turn over a man to Cincinnati. Herrmann wants pitchers, and a few days ago made the significant statement that he would get a good right-hander from the American.

Shortly after that the Boston Red Sox let it be known that they were trying to get rid of Larry Pape, who made a good record last year, though it was his first in fast company. Following so close on the heels of Herrmann's statement, it may have been pre-arranged.

Washington is another team that may be forced to cut loose a pitcher to the Reds if Pape stays in Boston. Griffith has much young heaving material, and could spare a man or two.

President Navin of Detroit also seems to have something coming. As a link in the deal he had to turn over Red Corriden to Cincinnati, which passed him on to the Cubs. Navin was paid $8,000, just what Corriden cost him. Baseball magnates do not usually sell players unless they expect to gain something.

Watch for a deal next week that will strengthen either Cincinnati or Detroit.

Hank O'Day is still the old fox. He turned down an offer yesterday to umpire in the National League, and President Lynch left Chicago peeved. Ban Johnson of the American is also after the veteran arbiter, but cannot dicker with him without the permission of the National. Hank did not have a pleasant job as manager of the Reds last year, but is willing to try his steering ability in a smaller league. If he receives an offer before Feb. 1 he will take it.

Morris Rath, the diminutive second sacker of the Sox, sent in his signed contract. Rath made good with a rush last year and should be even better in the coming campaign.

Lew Richie, the Cub pitcher, had a narrow escape from death when the motorcycle on which he was speeding on the Daytona, Fla., meach skidded and hurled him to the ground. The comedian was cut and bruised. Bill Hinchman of the
