

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that you lied to me. You went with the Morrisses to dinner and a motor trip."

"But I was with the men," he explained. "I intended to be with them all the evening, but when the Morrises invited me to go I told them I would have to be excused right after dinner. I did not telephone you, because I knew you would not want to go—and—"

"So you lied to me," I interrupted.

"Don't say that to me, Madge. I have told you the truth."

"I don't believe you and I don't think I shall ever believe you again. I think all men in the world are bad and you are among the lot."

"Oh, all right if you want to be unreasonable."

"I am not unreasonable. I have not slept all night."

"I knew something was the matter—you are not well or you would not talk this way."

"Dick, please don't, when I am angry and hurt, always lay it to a physical condition. I tell you my heart is broken because I cannot believe my own husband."
