

"CROWN PRINCE" PLAYS HOAX ON BRITAIN'S NOBILITY AND FAMOUS FLYING MAN!

"Crown Prince of Wurtemberg" and Claude Grahame-White.

BY MARY BOYLE O'REILLY.

London, England, April 1.—America is not the only country that gets fooled on titles, now and then! Right here, in England, where they grow them, one of the greatest hoaxes ever put over an unsuspecting public has just been played and all Britain's "common folks" are getting a great laugh over the way royalty "fell" for it!

It happened at the great aeroplane meet in Henden aerodrome and Claude Grahame-White, famous British aeronaut, who married Dorothy Taylor, New York heiress, was the principal actor—he and "Lord Stanton Hope" and the "crown prince of Wurtemberg," with various members of England's nobility as a background of "merry villagers!"

Introducing himself as "Lord Stanton Hope," a young man of charming manners made himself known to Mr. Grahame-White at the great flying meet. He said he had brought with him the crown prince of Wurtemberg. The prince then was introduced to Grahame-White, who introduced them both to the fashionable throng assembled in the paddock. The "prince" and "Lord Hope" at once made themselves at home with the society people, and became popular.

"I think his highness would not mind taking a flight," remarked "Lord Hope" to Mr. Grahame-White. The "prince" assented, and in a few
