SCENES IN VLADIVOSTOK

Former Resident Tells of Terror When War Broke Out.

CORNERS IN WHEAT AND OIL

Excitement When Japanese Shelled the Russian Town—Fifth in the Czar's Army—Submarine Boats En Route Over the Continent—Disaffection of Russians Over the War.

These are but early days in the history of the great racial struggle now being waged for supremacy in the orient. Hitherto the story has been mainly told through the medium of the submarine cables, says a writer in the London News, but the other day I had the privilege of an interview with an Englishman who has spent several months within the troubled area and from which he recently returned.

He was in Vladivostok before the outbreak of hostilities and has told me of the serenity which possessed men when war was deemed impossible, of the consternation when it appeared imminent and of the absolute terror when it actually broke out. Not the least interesting part of his story was that which shows how the love of money transcends even that of human life, how "corners" were made in wheat and kerosene and famine stared the people in the face. This latter commodity was bought up in large quantities by the Chinese traders and retailed in eight gallon cases at 5 rubles each, a little more than $2.50.

The Vladivostok forces, however, spoiled this little article of fixing the price of meat, wheat, kerosene and various other necessities of life, a standard from which no deviation was allowed.

"How did the populace receive the proclamation of war?" I asked. "Well, at first the people were terror-stricken. They fled in all directions—from the coast. Some went to Harbin, others to Blagovestchensk, and not a few to Nikolaevsk, but the hardships were many, and most of them soon returned. The chief difficulty was with regard to food. At first it was wheat. Then the government took all the meat, save a small quantity of pork for the troops, and we had to live on almost vegetable diet. Sheep will not live in Vladivostok. It is strange, but quite true. You may imagine how short we were running when I say that the Dalai-Vostok, one of the two Vladivostok pippers, came out printed on brown paper, all the white paper being used up.

"I shall never forget the bombardment which commenced on March 6. About 2 o'clock in the day Japanese shells came rattling into the town. Many of them went high and struck the hills at the back of the town. Others fell in the streets, but failed to explode. One did strike a house 200 yards from where I lived; this killed an old woman who lay ill in bed. The town was saved, I think, by high sighting on the part of the Japanese gunners and to the bad ammunition. During the bombardment a number of ladies ran about the streets weeping and wringing their hands, but the real damage done was very slight.

"As to how ran public opinion at this period? "The people planned their faith to the Russian army. Never once do I remember their accepting a report of a Russian defeat, official or otherwise. Kuropatkin was a hero; he was exceedingly popular. Alexieff they would not have at all. Poor Makaroff; he was a man after their own heart. I shall never forget the real grief which was exhibited when the news of his death arrived. Russian officials were very busy just about that time too. I was in a restaurant on more than one occasion when a Russian officer bade us stop conversing in English. Conspiring in public had to be in the Russian language or not at all. One queer thing I ought to mention was that the Chinese coolies resident in the town were refused railway tickets. As the only other way out was to walk many thousands of miles in an inhospitable country it was a capital scheme for keeping them in the place. The bulk of the manual labor in Vladivostok is carried on by the Chinese."

"Had you any difficulty in getting away? "None, except that they would not book me through to Moscow. My first ticket took me to Pogradich; from there I renewed to Harbin, thence to Manchuria station, where I finally got a through ticket to Moscow.

"I left Vladivostok at 8.15 a. m. on May 18, and we went slow to Irkutsk; from there, however, the express trains are again running to Moscow. I arrived at Irkutsk about 5 p. m. on May 27. When about a day's journey from Tunkin, the station at which passengers disembark in order to cross Lake Baikal, we stopped at a station, the name of which I forget. Standing in it was a train consisting of ten wagons, upon which were being conveyed five boats, which were, as far as I could see, Russian submarines. Each boat was loaded upon two trucks, and was, I think, about sixty feet long. Amidships was a manhole, just as you see in a British submarine, with a hand rail around it, forward was a hood with an appliance which might have been a periscope.

"All the boats are exactly alike, fitted with one torpedo tube only (in the bow) and a propeller with two blades. Each boat was painted a bright red. A Russian marine was on guard with fixed bayonet over each of the vessels, and on one man's cap I noticed the Russian equivalent to 'Torpedo Fleet.' In reply to the question whether the craft were torpedo boats or submarines the man simply replied, 'Ya ne znien' (I do not know). At Oby Station, which is the other side of Lake Baikal, we passed a similarly laden train, each of the vessels being identical with the first batch. I noticed also at Oby Station several large guns, possibly six inch, all going south."

"How did you find traveling on the Siberian railway? "Traveling is fairly comfortable. It would be much more so if one could have meals prepared on board. As it is, each passenger on starting has to purchase a kettle, a teapot, sugar and tea. At every railway station boiling water is supplied free."

"Is there much of what I might call 'military display' along the Trans-Siberian route? "Well, from Vladivostok to Irkutsk there was a soldier to every vest less than a mile of railway; at each station there were many. On an average a train passed every two hours, every one of which was either a transport or a Red Cross train. A great number of them also carried horses and artillery. After Irkutsk we saw the first passenger train."

"When did you arrive in Moscow? "Last Saturday week, and I stopped there for six days. During that time I paid several visits to various old Russian families, friends of mine. It struck me rather strangely to hear them say they had never known such unparliamentary feelings exhibited in Russia as during the past few months. Everywhere the people are discontented at the turn affairs have taken, and each of my friends was free, as free as one can be in Russia, in expressing a hope that this war would be a lesson to Russian agriculture and tend to make them more prepared in the future."
