GAMES TOMORROW.
Rock Island at Decatur.
Peoria at Davenport.
Bloomington at Dubuque.
Cedar Rapids at Springfield.

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 2.—Two out of three was the record of the handicapped Islanders at Bloomington. Yesterday's game was won through well placed hits with the assistance of errors on the part of Bloomington at critical stages. Scott had the game in hand save in the fourth inning and the home team was unable to bunt safe drives except in that session. Barker was slightly injured in the ninth and Smith went to the box, while Wright took the first sack.

The feature of the game was the fielding of Cook, Wanner and Beck. The two first named jointly accepted 21 chances and cut off many drives that seemed safely tagged for one or more bases. Score:

DEFEAT OF O'BRIEN

Philadelphia Couldn't Stop the Shifty Frisco Ex-Amateur.

OBLIGED TO TURN AND RUN

How the Californian Wore Down the Famous Eastern Star.

Sam Berger of San Francisco is the present big noise in the heavyweight pugilistic arena. As for the reason—well, every one knows it. Sam out-fought "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien in Quakertown and is now the foremost claimant for the classic throne left vacant when the unequalled Jim Jeffries took to the woods.

Sam had the crafty, shifty O'Brien lad going four ways when the gong got busy in Philadelphia. Jack was all in, his wind and strength were all out, and Sam had the answer in both of his brawny mitts. And the Berger boy was only an amateur a year ago too. Oh, sadness for the O'Brien clan!

It had been popularly predicted that Jack O'Brien would wipe Sam off our lovely sphere. It had been said with wise and knowing smiles that O'Brien in making this match had simply decided to make a little vacation money in the easiest manner possible. They likened Berger to a big "flem," and they said that O'Brien's favorite summer drink was lemonade.

When Berger made some stout speeches to the effect that if he ever got a chance at "Jumpin' Jack" O'Brien he would make him look like a broken toy the speeches were not listened to with any patience. They said that Berger would think of the San Francisco earthquake as a mere trifle after he had fallen against the whirling gloves of the magical O'Brien.

Defeated His Man.
But when the six rounds ended Berger was the bulky boy. He had beaten O'Brien. He had gone against the clever ringmaster without any fear, without any nervousness. He had played the game with a stout heart. He had taken the lightning jabs. He had withstood the cruel hooks. He had not for one instant backed away from the fray. He went ponderously pounding away at O'Brien's face and at his body, and if he missed and got sharp, stinging blows for his pains he refused to be at all discouraged or put out by them.

He kept after O'Brien. He made O'Brien dance his liveliest to keep out of harm's way. He was so persistent in his attack that there were times when the claimant of the heavyweight championship was obliged to turn tail and run like a rabbit to different parts of the ring.

He made O'Brien hug. He made O'Brien use every trick that the old ring warrior knows how to use when the fire gets too fierce for safety and comfort.

The fight itself was a splendid one. Never did the seconds of any minute in any round drag. The men were at it constantly, and Berger's absolutely constant attack upon his shiffter opponent of great repute was what won the crowd's heart.

O'Brien met the attacks with the best play of hands and feet that he has in his command, and a lightning fast and wonderful boxer he really is. But it was he only in the six rounds of superb, supple and slashing savagery that ever asked for quarter. He did it now and then in the last swift session of the fight by turning his gloves back of Berger's arms and holding until Referee Jack McGuigan a little scornfully would break the gloves away and free the big youthful Californian from the crablike clutch.

President Pulliam of the National league announces officially the suspension of Umpire Henry O'Day for violation of his contract and insubordination, and Joseph Ward of the Philadelphia club for violation of contract.

Umpire Schuster who officiated in the Three-Eye league games this season was almost mobbed at Memphis yesterday. The attack on the umpire followed an alleged assault by Manager Smith of Atlanta, when Schuster called the game on account of darkness. The police disguised Schuster as an officer and spirited him to his hotel.

Beldon Hill's wife and daughter are touring the circuit with the Rabbits on this trip and were forced to witness the old man ordered off the grounds by Umpire Wheeler at Peoria, on Monday. Hill asked President Holland to go over and watch Wheeler work yesterday. There must be something wrong if Beldon kinks. The Islanders make the same sort of complaint.

Sunday, Aug. 12, the baseball aggregation known as Green's Japanese, one of the few teams of that nationality on the road, will play with the Muscatine team at Moline. There is said to be nothing but Japs in the lineup and that they can play ball is demonstrated by the record they have made against other amateur and semi-professional teams in this vicinity this season.

Glen Liebhart, the former Rock Island pitcher, now known as the "Iron man" of the Southern league, from the number of double-headers he has pitched and won this season, yesterday duplicated his three former performances of the kind by defeating Shreveport 6 to 1 and 3 to 2. Several big league clubs are after him, but the Memphis management denies that he has been sold as yet.

SMITH BEATS PROFESSIONALS

Amateur Golf Champion Takes Honor Prize in Tournament.

New York, Aug. 1.—Alec Smith, of Nassau, L. I., this year's western and national open champion, and the Metropolitan Golf association champion of last year, won the honor prize in the professional golf tournament at Van Cortlandt park today. Fifty-seven of the best professional golfers in the country took part in the tournament and Smith won out cleverly. His total of 301 for 72 holes, was five strokes better than the second man, G. C. Turnbull, of Waterbury, Conn.

The next season Golden was with the tall end Milwaukee team of the National league. His most noteworthy performance with that club was the striking out of fourteen men of the Chicago team in a game which Milwaukee won, 10 to 2. Anson fanned twice, Pike three times and Start three.

In 1879 Golden returned to Rockford to play in the Northwest league. That season marked his retirement from the game with a strained ligament in his shoulder. He never returned to the professional ranks.

Garry Hermann is out on a wild hunt for pitchers for his Cincinnati club. He let three pretty good ones go in Drubot, Overall and Dornier. Probably Hermann doesn't know a good pitcher when he sees one.

LOCAL GOLFERS WIN SECOND MATCH

Defeat Team at LaCrosse, Wis., by Score of 13 to 4—Will Enter Onwentsia Tournament.

The Rock Island Arsenal Golf club's team on a tour, yesterday won from the team at LaCrosse, the score being 13 to 4. The members of the team are Cady, Mixter, French, and Ardo and Leon Mitchell. Next week the team plays at the Onwentsia Golf club tournament at Chicago. The team Tuesday defeated Dubuque, that being the first of their tour.

JULY WAS COOL AND DRY

Record for Month Compared With that of Past 35 Years.

July was a good average month in temperature, though rather dry, as the figures of Observer Shier striking an average for the past 35 years show. Within 12 degrees of the highest point ever recorded by the mercury in July and within five degrees of the lowest point reached in the month the average was 74 degrees, or one degree below the average during 35 years. The warmest day was the 21st, when 94 was reached, and the coldest was the 16th, when the mark was 51. There is now an accumulated excess of temperature since Jan 1 of 192. The rainfall was 2.26 inches, against an average of 3.54. There is an accumulated deficiency since Jan 1 of 4.03 inches, of which 1.28 inches resulted from last month's dryness. There were 17 clear days, 9 partly cloudy and 5 cloudy.
