During the investigations into vice in Chicago conducted first by the Chicago vice commission and later by Lieut.-Gov. Barratt, O'Hara's Illinois senate committee, department store girls, struggling against the low wage obstacle, played a prominent part.

Story after story is told of $6 shop girls, unable to satisfy their pleasure-loving tendencies, who listened to the promises of good times and good clothes made by men with money, only to wake up the next morning, ruined and disillusioned.
