OTTAWA TURNS OUT EN MASSE FOR BURIAL RITES OF DEAD WAR HERO

THROUGHS MOURN AT BIER OF LATE LIEUT. S. W. RAYMOND

GLOWING TRIBUTES

PEOPLE TURNED AWAY FROM ARMORY FLOCK TO CEMETERY TO WITNESS LOWERING OF BODY INTO ITS LAST RESTING PLACE—COMRADES AS PALL BEARERS.

Ottawa turned out en masse Saturday afternoon to do homage at the bier of its first returned battle slain war hero. The tribute which the whole city paid to the memory of Lieut. S. W. Raymond was brilliant in every way conceivable. Thousands joined in paying their last respects to the heroic officer who, early in the summer of 1918, was killed by a high explosive German shell while he and his comrades were fighting on the Ypres front.

The funeral procession, which was composed almost entirely of soldier comrades, fraternal brothers and city officials, was a monster attestation of the love and respect held for Lieut. Raymond. The cortege, seven blocks in length, consisted of more than a thousand persons and a long procession of carriages. At the armory, where more than 1,500 people were seated, 500 more were unable to gain admission to the building while the services were in progress. At the grave hundreds upon hundreds were assembled to witness the military burial while the body was lowered to its last resting place.

Deep paths overhung the armory as the Methodist ritual for the dead was presided over by Rev. H. F. Lawler, present pastor of the First church, and Rev. C. A. Hayes, friend and former pastor of the dead. The service was supplemented by the recitation of the church was a glowing tribute to Lieut. Glenn W. Woese, friend and wartime comrade of Lieut. Raymond. The eulogy delivered by Mr. Woese was touching in its appeal. He pointed out the sterling qualities of the deceased, both in private life and on the field of battle. His wife, Mrs. W. Woese, and family were three outstanding examples of the husband's character, the speaker said. Previous to Lieut. Woese's eulogy and at the close of the service a quartet consisting of Gus Bauehl, Fred Pritchard, Dr. N. A. Gurling and D. G. Cahill rendered sacred music. The prayer was made by Rev. Lawler and the service a carefully planned glorification of Lieut. Raymond as a citizen and as a soldier.

Members of the American Legion, Company C, the several branches of the Odd Fellowship, Marauders, Knights of Pythias and postal employees formed an escort to the body while it was being transferred from the Griefcatcher chapel to the armory. Draped in the American colors, his sword slanted on top, the casket was borne to the improvised altar formed with flowers on the shoulders of former 12th Infantry officers and comrades of the lieutenant. They were: Lieut. C. D. S. Myers of Pontiac, Carl G. A. Karr, Lieut. James Milligan of Chicago, Horace Thornton of Pontiac, Glenn W. Woese and Clifford Hodgins.
